4 SUBMARINES DESTROYED

British Admit Loss of 3; Say Plane Sank U-Boat

LONDON, Jan. 16—Three small British submarines have been lost during the last week while engaged upon mysterious and "particularly hazardous" service, presumably in German waters, the admiralty admitted today, claiming at the same time probable sinking of a German U-boat.

In a brief communique, which threw no light whatever upon the nature of their daring missions, the admiralty said:

"During the past week, the submarines Seahorse, Undine and Starfish, failed to return to their bases or report.

"These vessels were engaged in particularly hazardous service. The Admiralty fears that they must be regarded as lost. The next of kin has been informed.

"The German wireless has announced that part of the crews of the Undine and Starfish were rescued."

NAZIS CLAIMED 2

The German announcement, however, gave no details of the submarines' activity, and claimed only destruction of the Starfish and Undine, with no mention of the Seahorse. The Nazi communique said:

"The British submarines Starfish and Undine were destroyed by means of German defense measures at the German (Helgoland) Bight. A part of their crews were rescued."

The Starfish and Seahorse were submersibles of the Sword fish class, displacing 935 tons and carrying a complement of 40 men. The Undine, also a coastal type of submarine, displaced 730 tons and carried 27 men.

The terse British communique left England speculating as to the "particularly hazardous" service upon which they were engaged.

WOULD OUTDO GERMAN?

One theory was that the three submarines, working in a team,

GERMAN TROOPS ON MOVE

LONDON, Jan. 16 (INS)—New reports of German troop movements along the Belgo-Dutch frontier were contained in a Reuter's (British) News Agency dispatch from Amsterdam today.

A telegram to the newspaper Westfaelische Landeszeitung from the railway junction at Loehne in northern Westphalia was quoted as saying:

"For the past few days, crowded trains have been rolling ceaselessly through the junction.

"Field-gray uniforms monopolize the scene."

Britain today gave up three submarines as lost, the first acknowledged British submarine losses due to German action during the war.

The admiralty said the submarines Starfish, Seahorse and Undine, which carried normal complements totalling 107 men, were counted as war casualties, since they failed to report to their bases in the past week. Britain said she believed one German submarine had been sunk in the North sea.

The British statement came shortly after Germany announced two British submarines had been destroyed in Helgoland Bight and part of their crew saved. The Germans named the Undine and Starfish, but made no mention of the Seahorse.

A Soviet broadcast accused Sweden of forcing her unemployed to fight Finland, a renewal of Russian charges that Finland's neighbors were failing to observe strict neutrality in the Russian-Finnish conflict.

Both Sweden and Norway protested to Moscow yesterday against alleged Soviet violations of their territory—Russian bombers were said to have attacked a Swedish island and Red warplanes to have flown over far northern Norway.

Finns reported transportation difficulties were hampering the Russian invaders, particularly on the Karelian Isthmus where great masses of troops have been concentrated in an attempt, thus far unsuccessful, to crack the main Finnish defense line.

A number of Finnish cities tabulated new damage from Soviet air raids yesterday. Hardest hit were the coastal cities of Viipuri and Turku.

HORE-BELISHA, PREMIER TELL OF CABINET SHAKEUP

By CHARLES A. SMITH

International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Jan. 16 (INS)—The "very great qualities" of Leslie Hore-Belisha — presumably his dash, drive and ruthless energy—created difficulties which compelled his removal as war secretary, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today.

After Hore-Belisha himself had admitted differences of "opinion, outlook, temperament and understanding" among his colleagues at the War Office, Chamberlain reiterated there were no clashes on questions of policy and added:

"I will only say that I became aware of difficulties arising out of the very great qualities of Mr. Hore-Belisha which in my view made it desirable that a change should occur."

When Col. Josiah Wedgwood, Independent, charged during debate that Hore-Belisha was dismissed because of anti-Jewish prejudice, Chamberlain leaped to the floor with a formal denial.

Frequently interrupted by opposition shouts of "you were anxious to save your face" and why don't you resign," Chamberlain stated that he himself only held office by favor of the House.

WILL RESIGN IF—

"If at any time the House thinks a change desirable (here the opposition shouted 'the country does!'), I shall accept the decision, like Mr. Hore-Belisha, without complaint," the prime minister said.

In his own personal statement, Hore-Belisha stated that differences between him and members of his staff sprang from zeal and single-

British Army Too Democratic?

LONDON, Jan. 16—Hints of the bitter struggle for power going on within army circles in Britain were revealed in a telling point in the reply of Leslie Hore-Belisha, deposed secretary for war before Parliament today.

Hore-Belisha, the man who shelved and made generals, and made it possible for a man from the ranks to become a commissioned officer, told the House of Commons:

"It did not occur to me to consider that we were making the army too democratic to fight for democracy."

BULLETINS

LONDON, Jan. 16 (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain informed the House of Commons today that Britain and France signed economic and financial agreements with Turkey at Paris on Jan. 8, providing for a loan of £25,000,000 ($100,000,000) to Turkey for the purchase of armaments.

LONDON, Jan. 16 (INS)—The lull on the Western Front may be "sharply broken" at any moment, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told the House of Commons in his weekly war review today.

2 Russian Companies Annihilated

By PETER DE HEMMER GUDME

International News Service Special Correspondent

HELSINKI, Jan. 16—Finnish troops wiped out two Russian companies on the eastern front, an official communique announced tonight.

"The usual harrassing artillery fire occured on the Karelian Isthmus," the bulletin said.

"An attack on Taitale was repulsed with heavy losses.

"Two enemy companies were annihilated on the Salla sector.

"Between 70 and 80 Soviet planes carried out bombardments of the interior yesterday. The Finnish air force bombarded enemy troops several times."

More than a score of Finnish cities suffered in the Russian air raids, while a new wave of bitter cold greatly restricted ground activities.

The cities attacked by Russian planes included Viborg (Viipuri), the country's second largest metropolis, and the southwestern port of Tarku.

About 400 Soviet planes rained bombs upon houses and streets, killing and wounding scores of persons—most of them women, according to Finnish authorities.

At Ekenaes 400 out of the town's 700 houses were destroyed.

The port of Hangoe in the south

Mrs. Dowd Denies Sheriff Made Scrubwomen Buy Jobs

By GEORGE HOLLAND
(Copyright, 1940, Boston Evening American)

You do not put words in the mouth of Mary Dowd, whom her missing husband and friends call May. She comes close to a reporter's ideal for an interview. It is not that she "thinks in headlines." Gone gaunt from heartbreak in a two months' "mystery trip" she has lived with the truth and the lies in the unfolding of The Baffling Case of John F. Dowd. That life has become, suddenly, a perpetual headline—which changes from day to day. One of those changing headlines shrilled the cry:

"Scrubwomen Paid Dowd to Hold Jobs."

And part of the transformation of a bright-eyed, vibrant, charming young woman to the wan, too-dim person that is now Mary Dowd may be charged to that "angle" of the so-called Dowd story.

The tears were not yet dry, in the early part of our first talk, when Mrs. Dowd plunged into this "angle," the lowest blow of any struck at the defenseless former sheriff of Suffolk County. (Yes, we know—and so does she—that John Dowd can blame himself, because of his absence, for the lack thus far of a defense.)

"In my heart and soul, and before my God, I know my John never took a cent from a scrubwoman in payment for a job," was Mrs. Dowd's declaration of faith to the scrubwomen-shakedown charge. "All his life he has been doing things for people like scrubwomen. He has given them money, not taken it. It is simply not true."

JOHN MARION FOX

JOAN BENNETT'S NO. 1 POISON VICTIM

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 16 (AP)—Film Actress Joan Bennett's first husband, John Marion Fox, 38, lay gravely ill in a hospital today, a victim of poisoning from an overdose of sleeping tablets.

"I didn't like the idea of Joan Bennett being married to that other guy," Fox was quoted as saying by Dr. A. D. Trotter, police surgeon.

Miss Bennett eloped and was married last week in Phoenix, Ariz., to Walter Wanger, motion picture producer.

Barbara Downey

Efforts to locate her were unsuccesful, but her sister, Barbara Bennett Downey, wife of Morton Downey, radio singer, appeared at the hospital and was admitted to Fox room.

TOOK SLEEP TABLETS

Attendants whispered he roused from his stupor momentarily and whispered:

"God bless you, Barbara."

Barbara made arrangements to have Fox transferred to a private hospital. She said her sister still was on her wedding trip and she did not know where to locate her.

Dr. Trotter said Fox—once wealthy but listed at the hospital as a salesman—told him he had taken 100 tablets of a hypnotic drug. The physician gave him a chance of recovery, but added, "it will be some time before we can tell."

Later, at a private hospital to which Fox was removed, attendants described his condition as "definitely better."

Detectives said Fox called an ambulance to his apartment shortly before midnight and asked that he be taken to a hospital.

GAVE AID TO HUMBLE

She talked rapidly and vehemently for a while. She called on her mother, Mrs. John J. O'Connell, to be her witness, when her sincerity itself was witness enough.

Money from scrubwomen indeed!

Hadn't John F. Dowd based his political career on acts of a nature to belie the very thought of prying money from unfortunate old women.

In the 10 years since City Councilor John F. Dowd first took his place in the lofty, dignified council chamber in City Hall, his life—and hers—had been given to the service of the humbler of the citizens.

But more of that later. There are questions to be answered, questions we listed yesterday because answers must be filled in before the denouncement of the "Dowd Story" is ready for review.

Those "parties," ("revels" they were called in sensational published references)! What about those "gay times" in the fine house given the sheriff of Suffolk County by a generous public?

Liquor, women, laughter, music, and yes, champagne for the enjoyment of the sheriff's cronies while a shadow's length distant, less

3 Save Boy From Brook In Malden

A 4-year-old Malden boy was snatched from death today when rescuers plunged into rain-swollen Spot Pond brook to save him after he had been swept more than 150 feet downstream.

The child's bobbing body, kept afloat by heavy clothing, had been carried through one long culvert and was approaching another.

The little victim, John Rogers, a twin son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rogers of Mountain ave., Malden, apparently fell into the brook while he was playing in Mountain Ave. Park, not far from his home.

THROUGH CULVERT

Before he was seen, the swollen stream had swept him through the culvert leading under Mountain ave. and was whirling him rapidly toward the series of culverts and sewers under Malden sq.

An unidentified woman's screams called the boy's plight to the attention of three men seated in an automobile.

The three, Daniel E. Connell, former Malden park superintendent; City Councilman Robert J. McDonough of Malden and Raymond Doucette of Clifton st., Malden, dashed to the rescue.

DRAG BOY OUT

They plunged into the brook at a spot where it was 20 feet wide and four or five feet deep.

Having got the little Rogers boy ashore, the rescuers hailed Dr. William Leeds, Malden city physician, who happened to be passing. He administered first aid. Then Dr. Leeds took him home and said he was probably out of danger.

Divers Called to Hunt Bodies Of 3 Boys Drowned in Harbor

Three divers were called in today by police in an endeavor to recover from Old Harbor, South Boston, the bodies of three boys drowned yesterday when an ice floe broke.

Dragging operations by four policemen in two boats were halted by Police Supt. Edward W. Fallon when icy blasts and rough water made this work hazardous.

The police head, personally visiting the South Boston beach, called in the boats with the ice-coated, half-frozen officers and they were warmed with hot coffee brought to the wind-swept strand in a police machine.

DIVERS ARE CALLED

Fallon announced that he had called in Diver Fred Wallace of Somerville and had asked him to get two more divers to help him.

From a lobster boat, 150 feet off Carson Beach, Wallace was lowered into 8 feet of water and covered sections 150 yards wide on each descent before the boat moved on to another location. More than 500 spectators lined the shore.

Hope for any speedy recovery of the bodies lay, police said, in ability of other youths who were near the scene yesterday to remember the approximate spot where the youngsters went to their deaths.

The missing boys, their bodies feared mired in the deep ooze of the bay, were:

Wallace Whitehouse, 12, and

his brother Ralph, 8, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin J. Whitehouse of Old Colony ave., and Charles Kendall, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Kendall, also of Old Colony ave.

As police sought the bodies, a playmate of the youths, Robert Bustin, 12, of Old Harbor Village, tried to point out the spot where he thought the trio went into the water but the grappling irons failed to locate them at this point.

Harbor police, with the launch William H. McShane, searched all night. On shore officers of the South Boston station used floodlights as they patrolled the beach.

ONE BODY IS FOUND

In East Boston, officers found the body of Joseph Curry, 15, of Wordsworth st., East Boston, off Jeffries Point. He was believed to have been trapped in deep mud after ice broke beneath him.

His gloved hands were visible above water, outstretched, but his boots had mired him as the tide swept in, police said.

At Carney Hospital suffering from shock and the effects of icy water upon a rheumatic heart is Robert Crowell, 10, of Old Colony

Special Grand Jury Launches Spy Probe

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (INS)—A special grand jury to receive wholesale evidence of espionage, sabotage and other activities of foreign agents was convened in the capital today.

Described by Department of Justice officials as the most important move to date in the government's campaign against law violations by representatives of foreign nations, the special jury was expected to devote all its time to espionage and related cases.

Formation of the jury was one of the last major steps directed by Atty.-Gen. Frank Murphy in his vigorous anti-foreign agent drive.

ACE PROBERS ON JOB

Senate confirmation of Murphy's appointment to the Supreme Court is probable before the week is out.

Two crack assistants to the Attorney-General are ready to go before the grand jury with evidence alleging attempted theft of military secrets, use of fraudulent passports, and failure to register with the State Department on the part of numerous individuals and firms.

The two attorneys—Henry G. O'Donnell and Floyd M. Rett—said among those to be investigated were Robert Minor, Israel Amter, Alex Trachtenberg, A. A. Heller, Rebecca Grecht, Joseph Brodsky, Wallace E. Douglas, J. N. Golos, International Publishers, Inc., World Tourists, Inc., and Workers Library Publishers, Inc.

WILL SPED ACTIONN

Of the individuals, the better known are Minor and Amter, perennial candidates for political office on the Communist party ticket; Trachtenberg, long-time alleged Communist publicist, and Joseph Brodsky, attorney for Earl Browder, Communist party 1936 presidential candidate about to be tried for violation of the passport laws.

The two New York publishing firms purportedly are distribution points for Communist literature, the Justice Department said. Trachtenberg is reported to be director of International Publishers.

More than 500 men and women were impaneled by the court, with 23 to be chosen for membership on the grand jury. Quick action by the jury is expected.

The regular federal grand jury a few weeks ago lost little time in returning indictments against several alleged Communist agents and a Soviet publishing firm.

Dewey Asks Pay Increase of $2000

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (AP)—Dist. Atty. Thomas E. Dewey asked for a $2000-a-year raise today to make up last year's reduction.

The request to raise his salary from $18,000 to $20,000 was included in his office budget estimate of $826,731, which is $32,735 over his current annual allowance.

$850,000 BAIL—Grouped in anteroom of Brooklyn Federal Court, 16 of the 17 men arrested on charges of plotting to overthrow the U. S. government, await arraignment. The 17 alleged plotters are held in bail totalling $850,000.

MORE ARRESTS DUE IN U. S. REVOLT PLOT

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (INS)—More arrests in other cities were expected today to follow the seizure in New York City of 17 members of a secret group of the Christian Front organization charged with plotting an almost fantastic conspiracy to overthrow the United States government.

With these 17 being held under close federal guard in default of $50,000 bail each pending a hearing Feb. 5 on their pleas of not guilty, federal agents were reported to be pursuing their investigation in other cities, including Boston.

Although there was some skepticism that the sorry-looking lot of 17 arraigned before Federal Judge Grover Moscowitz could have carried out a plot of such grandiose proportions, Chief G-Man J. Edgar Hoover took a serious view of the arrests.

"We have evidence to substantiate every claim we have made," Hoover declared.

Hoover charged the plot called for the assassination of 14 Congressmen and the bombing or seizure of navy yards, arsenals, armories bridges, public utilities, customs houses, Federal Reserve banks and mints.

To accomplish this, it was charged, the men had assembled a motley arsenal of arms and ammunition, believed stolen from National Guard armories.

BISHOP "MYSTERY MAN"

William Gerald Bishop, 37, named by Hoover as the leader of the group, emerged as the mystery man of the investigation.

Hoover alleged he was born in Vienna and had been thrice deported both by England and Belgium but New York police listed him as William Arneck, a Nazi propagandist, who had served 60 days on a charge of violating the Sullivan Law regulating the use of fire-arms.

He was later taken to Ellis Island for deportation, according to New York police, but succeeded in remaining in this country when he convinced authorities he was born in Salem, Mass.

Hoover listed Bishop as a writer but New York police were unable to discover any of his writings. They claimed he used aliases of Bishop, Bishopstone and Brown but that his real name was Arneck.

They claimed he was a steward on the ill-fated Vestris which sank in a sea disaster and had entered this country by jumping ship in March, of 1926.

18TH MAN FREED

The 18th man originally taken into custody, listed as John M. Ryan, was later released by G-men with apologies. His arrest was termed a mistake and he was absolved of all connection with the alleged plot.

In Brooklyn, where the men were arraigned under heavy guard before a crowd of curious that both booed and cheered them, U. S. Atty. Harold M. Kennedy said the arrests and the seizure of the arsenal had "only scratched the surface."

Capt. John T. Prout, Jr., of the New York National Guard, named by Hoover as one of the leaders along with Bishop and John F. Cassidy, was relieved of his command.

TAXES are destroying opportunity.

Army, Navy Join Bomb Theft Quiz

Army and Navy intelligence officers and G-men today entered the investigation of what police believe is a larceny of two bombs from the U. S. Navy, which resulted in the arrest of an East Boston man.

A larceny charge was to be brought against the East Boston man today, according to police. He was seized at his room in a London st., East Boston, lodging house. The two bombs, aerial explosives used by navy planes, allegedly were found in his bureau.

Woman of 92 Burns to Death

Apparently attempting to dump a panful of blazing grease into a sink, Mrs. Katherine Bryan, 92, one of Winthrop's oldest residents, was burned to death today in her home in Washington ave.

The aged woman was found on the floor in a flaming pantry when firemen arrived after being called by neighbors who saw smoke pouring from the single-family house.

The flames were speedily extinguished, but Mrs. Bryan was dead.

Mrs. Bryan had been left in the house while her daughter, Mrs. Lillian McQuarrie, 55, was shopping in Boston.

From a trail across the floor and from a clackened pan in the sink, firemen said they believed the grease had caught fire and the aged woman had attempted to carry it to the sink.

Monoxide Gas Victim Saved

Overcome by carbon monoxide gas as he worked under an auto in a garage in Center st., Malden, Lawrence Gordon, 32, of Franklin st. Malden, was unconscious for 45 minutes today before firemen revived him with an inhalator.

Gordon's condition was discovered by Amos C. Cook, proprietor of the garage. He and a helper dragged the unconscious mechanic to the open air and called the fire department.

The inhalator was successfully used under direction of Deputy Fire Chief William R. Mora and Dr. Frank Stella.

$1,300,000 Allotted To State Reservoir

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 16—Gov. Frank Murphy today said the federal government has allotted $1,300,000 for construction of the Blackwater Reservoir in Webster, Mass., as the second Merrimack River Valley flood control project.

Newton Ready For Fund Drive

Newton's part in Greater Boston's 1940 Community Fund Campaign was all drawn up today, completed at a final meeting of the Newton organization last night before swinging into the actual drive next Monday.

J. Alexander Lane, community chairman for Newton in the campaign, presided at the "Dutch treat" dinner meeting and introduced former Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, president of the Community Federation of Boston.

Last year, it was pointed out by Adams, 4860 days of hospital ward care and 8880 treatments in clinics were provided by agencies of Greater Boston's Community Fund.

No less than 41 per cent of this service, he said in stressing reasons why residents of all metropolitan cities and towns should give aid, was rendered free or for part rate.

Others at the meeting included Mayor Paul M. Goddard of Newton, honorary associate chairman of the Newton organization; William V. M. Fawcett, director of the Newton Community Chest; Thomas H. Eliot, New England administrator of the wage and hour division, and Francis C. Gray, general chairman of Greater Boston's 1940 Community Fund campaign.

Mae Murray Loses Fight For Her Son

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 16 (AP) — Blonde Mae Murray, glamour girl of the silent screen, failed today in her effort to regain custory of her 13-year-old son, Koran Mdivani, who chose to live apart from his mother in a simple rural home.

State Supreme Court Justice Franc'' Bergan, citing Miss Murray's "singular" lack of interest in the boy, son of Prince David Mdivani, whom she divorced in 1933, decided he should remain in the custody of a family in nearby Averill Park.

The jurist dismissed and quashed a writ of habeas corpus obtained by the thrice-wedded, thrice-divorced actress in her attempt to obtain the boy's custody.

In his decision, Justice Bergan left the door open for Miss Murray to renew application for custody at such time as she is able and willing to establish a home for Koran and "satisfies the court of her good faith in maintaining the child with her and affording him the direct and personal influence of a mother."

Koran ruled against the actress during questioning in judicial chambers by Justice Bergan, presiding at the proceedings brought by Miss Murray against Bessie Cunning, and her brothers, John and Cortland, of Averill Park.

The boy came to the Cunning home in January, 1936, following a double mastoid operation, performed in New York city by Dr. Daniel Cunning, a brother of the defendants in the action.

Miss Murray maintained that a California court has already awarded her custody. Her action against the Prince in California for support of Koran and the Prince's counter-claim for custody of the boy awaited disposition of the proceedings here.

Suspect Held Here for N. H.

After his arrest in Columbus ave., South End, Curtis L. Jones, 35, of Shrewsbury, was turned over to New Hampshire State Police today, charged with being a member of a ring which sold burial lots in a four-acre weed field near Hookset, N. H., which they had christened "Peace Haven."

Held in New Hampshire on similar charges are Paul Cassidy, 40, and Alfred Cohen, 45, both of Boston.

It is alleged the men, without a license, sold stock in the Haven, and in some instances accepted other securities in lieu of cash. Maj. Ralph W. Caswell of New Hampshire said a fourth man was sought.

Authorities at Washington want Jones on similar charges.

Banker Pynchon's Son Kills Self

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (AP)—George M. Pynchon, Jr., 36, socially prominent aviation enthusiast and son of the former head of Pynchon & Co., investment banking, grain and cotton firm, was found in a stable on his Long Island estate.

A shotgun charge had gone through his head. A shotgun, with one discharged cartridge was lying beside him. Sergt. Joseph Hizenski of the Nassau County police said it apparently was a case of suicide.

Finnish Authoress To Wed Danish Artist

HELSINKI, Jan. 16 (INS)—Engagement of Sally Salminen, prize-winning Finnish authoress, to Johannes Duerkopf, a Danish artist whom she first met in Copenhagen in 1937, was announced today.

Miss Salminen, now serving in Finland's Lotta Svaard, women's wartime auxiliary organization, as a volunteer, and Duerkopf will be married in Helsinki in a few days.

$94,492,166 CUT URGED IN BUDGET

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (AP)—Completely denying funds for two agencies created by President Roosevelt, the House appropriations committee slashed budget estimates for the government's "independent offices" today by $94,492,166.

In recommending that Congress appropriate only $1,160,212,307 of the $1,194,704,473 asked by Mr. Roosevelt, the committee trimmed $75,000,000 from the Maritime Commission's estimate of $200,000,000 for the ship construction fund.

Because of contract authorizations, however, it appeared that this saving was only temporary and would have to be restored later under the 10-year shipbuilding program.

2 OFFICES DENIED CASH

The National Resources Planning Board and the Office of Government Reports—formerly the National Emergency Council—were the Roosevelt agencies denied funds by the committee. These offices were transferred to the White House under the reorganization plan last summer.

The committee turned down President Roosevelt's request for $1,860,000 for the planning board and $1,055,000 for the reports office with the explanation that it could find nothing in "legislative history" authorizing their existence.

President Roosevelt's uncle, Frederic Delano, is chairman of the resources board.

The independent offices bill provides funds for most federal agencies not in the regular departments.

CUTS 75 MILLIONS

Approving $125,000,000 for the maritime commission's ship construction fund, the committee said it believed an additional $75,000,000 asked could be withheld for the present because of "inevitable delays which are encountered in a program of this character."

The total cut listed under the heading, "Executive Offices of the President," was $2,136,400, although no reduction was made in any of the sums proposed for the White House itself. This sum included the reductions in the planning board and office of government reports and small items.

Immediate House consideration was asked for the bill.

The biggest real whack was taken at the federal works agency which was created in last year's reorganization. The committee cut $15,397,290 from this agency, recommending $187,113,270 for its purposes.

The committee recommended a cut in government promotions. It proposed complete elimination of an estimated $3,088,000 item to cover promotions in all government branches, including the 10 regular departments.

WANDA McKAY, SCREEN STARLET
Lent Lips to Art, Science—Kissed 'n' Kissed

Wanda's Kissing Bee For 'Sake of Science'

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 16 (AP)—The most thoroughly kissed girl in kiss-conscious Hollywood, at least for today, is Wanda McKay.

Miss McKay (nee Quackenbush) lent her lips to art, science, and motion picture economy in a kissing bee sponsored by Wally Westmore, the makeup artist.

Six months ago, Westmore undertook to provide a kiss-proof lip rouge for an industry which thrives on kiss scenes.

Today he took a brush, and went to work on the McKay mouth.

Two minutes later the petite green-eyed brownette was ready with lips armored to meet the osculatory advances of whatever leading man the obliging Paramount Studio Publicity Department should round up.

WORK TO PARTNER

The first of these, Richard Denning (nee Denninger of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.,) appeared, time card in hand and duly stamped according to the working regulations of the Screen Actors' Guild.

Kisser-elect Denning was speedily followed by John Laird of Waukegan, Ill.,) and by Robert Paige (nee Page of Indianopolis,) both similarly assured against overwork.

On a fittingly-dainty settee of tan and gold, Kissee McKay and lip-rouge withstood the first assault of Kisser Paige's lips.

MAKES HER GIGGLE

Kissers Laird and Denning followed in turn through a dozen still pictures and more.

Miss McKay giggled occasionally.

"I get so tickled I can't help it," she explained.

Then the three boys and Miss McKay settled down to serious work. After 74 smacks her lips were still perfect.

Westmore said his compound would be restricted to studio uses and would save thousands of dollars annually by eliminating the need for constant repair work, between scenes on the lips of much-kissed actresses.

O'Hare Children Left $437,768

CHICAGO, Jan. 16 (AP)—An inventory of the estate of Edward J. O'Hare, slain president of Sportsman's Park race track, listing cash and securities valued at $437,768, had been filed and approved in probate court today.

O'Hare was killed by shotgun assassins as he drove along a Southwest Side boulevard last Nov. 2.

His estate, left in trust to his son, E. H. O'Hare, an officer in the United States navy, and two daughters, Patricia and Marilyn, consisted principally of stock in kennel clubs and horse race tracks here and in Massachusetts and Florida.

HUEY LONG IS 'GHOST' AT POLLS

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 16 (INS)—Lonisiana was voting for a governor today in a primary election expected to decide the fate of the political empire that the late Huey P. Long came out of the hills to establish 12 years ago.

So important is the second issue—fate of the Long dynasty—that a record turnout of 600,000 voters was predicted for the statewide Democratic primary, in which many other state officials are nominated. In Louisiana, a one-party state, nomination is tantamount to election.

With its authority and power culled by amazing revelations of graft, the machine has placed the mantle of responsibility on the shoulders of Governor Earl K. Long, younger brother of the late "Kingfish."

As gubernatorial candidate, Gov. Long serves as the standard-bearer for a machine which became known all over the nation when the blazing banner of "share our wealth" was held on high by Huey.

Huey was slain in September, 1935, and with his death the fire that kept "share our wealth" alive has slowly faded to ashes.

Opposing Governor Long are four Independents.

Sam Jones, 42-year-old Lake Charles attorney, is advocating a reform program, backed by a majority of Louisiana's press.

James Noe, State Senator and personal friend of Huey, also is advocating reform. He has charged the present administration has not been faithful to the ideals of Huey.

James Morrison, 32-year-old Hammond attorney, has been violently anti-Administration. He has charged wholesale graft and corruption and promised that he'll "put all the thieves" in jail.

Vincent Moseley, quiet-spoken Opelousas attorney, conducted his campaign along Utopian lines. He consistently refused to accept contributions.

Hits Nomination As F. R. 'Spite'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (INS)—Sen. Sheridan Downey (D.) of California, a leader of old-age pension forces, has accused President Roosevelt of appointing Paul R. Leake as customs collector at San Francisco, because of "resentment" against Downey.

Appearing before a Senate finance subcommittee considering the nomination, Downey angrily described Leake, a newspaper publisher as being "personally obnoxious to me."

"I believe that President Roosevelt has been actuated by personal resentment in making this appointment, because, first, I defeated former Senator McAdoo, and second, because I opposed the President's neutrality program in the Senate," Downey exclaimed.

Drops Dead as Jury Gives Him $21,560

While a jury was debating the fate of a suit he had brought against the Boston Housing Authority, Hyman Zukor, veteran Charlestown resident and real estate owner, dropped dead from a heart shock, it was revealed today as his widow was near collapse from grief.

Although the jury returned a verdict in Zukor's favor, it came too late to comfort either him, or his heart-broken widow—who blames his death to the strain of the trial.

All last week he sat in Suffolk Superior Court as Atty. Daniel Sullivan, from the firm of Lyne, Woodworth and Evarts, fought the Housing Authority which had offered $12,100 for property owned by Zukor in Sprague st., Charlestown.

Last Friday the jury returned Zukor went to his home after thanking his attorney, there to wait the verdict. During the trial he had been so ill his own attorney feared to use him as a witness.

On Saturday, at his home in Bunker Hill st., Charlestown, Zukor succumbed.

Yesterday the jury returned a sealed verdict for $21,560 for the property, all unaware that the plaintiff, whose plea they had supported against the Housing Authority, had died.

His widow, Mrs. Leah Zukor, was informed of the verdict at the home of her son, Sydney Zukor, Nahant st., Revere.

But the court victory brought her no joy.

MRS. MARY SCANLON SUCCUMBS

Mrs. Mary Agnes O'Meara Scanlon, long a resident of the Back Bay and mother of Cornelius T. Scanlon, night editor of the Boston Evening American, died at City Hospital today, following a brief illness.

Widow of Thomas F. Scanlon of Worcester, she was born in Providence 60 years ago.

She was educated at St. Xavier Convent of Providence and St. Elizabeth's Convent at Allegheny, N. Y.

For many years she had lived in Haviland st., Back Bay. Besides her son, she leaves a sister, Sarah E. O'Meara of Washington, D. C.

Funeral services will be from the home, 13 Haviland st., Thursday.

Solemn high mass of requiem will be celebrated at St. Cecilia's Church, Back Bay, at 9:45 a. m.

Murphy Given Final O. K.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (AP)—The Senate confirmed today the nomination of Atty.-Gen. Frank Murphy to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

The action was taken on a voice vote, without audible dissent.

The chamber then quickly approved the nominations of Solicitor-General Robert H. Jackson to be Attorney-General and Judge Francis Biddle to be Solicitor-General.

Murphy, 46 years old, will take his seat on the high court as President Roosevelt's fifth appointment to the nine-member body.

Methodists Unite Here To Ordain 8

For the first time in the history of the American Methodist church, leaders of North and South joined today with a Negro leader to ordain eight men to the ministry.

Hundreds of Methodists, representing 1000 churches in New England, filled the Copley Methodist Church to watch the solemn services conducted by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of Boston, Bishop Clare Purcell of Charlotte, N. C., and Bishop Robert E. Jones of Columbus, O., noted Methodist leader of Negroes.

Delivering the principal address, Bishop Jones said:

"The church by the side of the road is an analogy. It must get into the fight—enrich, redeem, purify all the streams of life. We need a Wesleyan movement in modern garb, with modern outlook, spirit, technique and daring.

"We must match radio, airplane television, wireless telegraphy, modern communication and transportation with a modern zeal for soul-saving."

Bishop Ivan Lee Holt, former president of the Federal Council of Churches in America, warned that a "truer church" was needed to combat the evils of the present generation.

"Unless we lift the banner of a just society," he said, "and march under it, it is destined that Christianity will cease to be an ethical religion and the church will become a bare social survival, a relic in the museum of history.

"Methodism must keep its approach to the lowly. Society will never be saved from the top; it must be saved at the bottom. We can never ignore the humblest without doing violence to the best."

"YOU BET YOUR LIFE I LIKE to save money. Who doesn't? But I like quality too—in anything I buy," says Hal Mann, Chicago, Ill. "Old Quaker is just as smooth and mellow and delicious as any high-priced whiskey I ever drank."

How We Can Sell a Rich 4-Year-Old Whiskey at this Low Price!

"I DON'T SEE HOW SUCH A fine whiskey can sell for such a low price," says C. Joseph Lynch, Salesman of Fall River, Mass.

● Everybody knows a manufacturer can sell at a low price because of one thing alone—big volume sales.

It is for exactly this reason that famous Old Quaker—so rich and delicious that thousands prefer its taste to many higher-priced whiskies—actually sells at a price so remarkably low.

Thanks to our big volume sales, we are one of the world's largest distillers of fine straight whiskies today. Such huge operations make economies possible. These economies we pass along to our millions of customers, in the belief that our lower prices will mean still bigger sales for us, and still better whiskey for you. Sample Old Quaker yourself. minded determination to win the war against Hitlerism?

Loudly cheered by all sections of the house, Hore-Belisha said:

"I have no thought but to win the war, and must be guided by that overriding consideration . . .

"I selected my collaborators just because they were not complacent, acquiescent men.

DEMOCRATIC ARMY

"If there were differences of opinion, outlook, temperament and understanding, they were no deeper than must occur among any association of men bent upon pressing tasks of more than transitory importance."

Declaring that his "democratization" of the army and other military reforms resulted from common endeavors by members of his ministry, Hore-Belisha said:

"It did not occur to me to consider that we were making an army too democratic to fight for democracy.

"So far as I know, there has been no conflict on policy with any of my cabinet colleagues on any point concerning the war office or otherwise.

"Until last Thursday week, the premier's support in the task entrusted to me was readily forthcoming.

DOESN'T BLAME OFFICERS

"The premier is free to exercise impartial judgment and make what appointments may seem to him to be good. I could not accept presidency of the Board of Trade (a post offered to him by Chamberlain) because I felt that the considerations which persuaded the premier to make the change would not allow my energetic discharge of such an office."

The deposed cabinet minister, now a "back-bencher" in Commons, rejected charges that his dismissal had been brought about by army officers whom he had offended.

"I am reluctant to believe that any of the high officers with whom I have been associated would be so unfaithful to the code which imbues the whole army to make any representations irregularly, or if they had done so that they would be contenanced," he said.

"War compels and unifies the whole effort of a nation, and I trust it is in that spirit that I have spoken."

Chamberlain followed Hore-Belisha and once again assured the house that the minister's removal would mean no change in policy. He declined, however, to give the reasons for Hore-Belisha's dismissal.

"I have not heard of any serious difference of opinion between Mr. Hore-Belisha and any member of the army council," the prime minister said.

"No serving officer at any time said any word to me which was inconsistent with his duty to his chief.

"If a man holding public office had to make public all his reasons for making a change, it would be impossible to make any change at all."

Here Chamberlain was interrupted by opposition shouts of:

"Why don't you change yourself?"

Ignoring this jibe, Chamberlain continued:

"There is no foundation whatever for the sugestion of a 'battle' between Mr. Hore-Belisha and so-called 'brass hats.'

"No such consideration entered my head in connection with the change which I thought it my duty to make."

RED BOMBERS BLAST 20 TOWNS IN FINLAND was bombed almost constantly, and today 11 major fires are still raging.

Abo was badly damaged, and one bomb made a direct hit on a raid shelter, killing all its occupants, numbering about 30.

Finnish authorities charged that no military objectives were reached and asserted the Russians were merely seeking revenge for their military defeats.

"Give us pursuit planes!" was the cry of the Finns, who pointed out that, with only two fighting craft available at Helsinki, Russian bombers were kept away from the capital. At other points, the Finns said, only a few pursuit planes were needed to drive off the Russians.

REDS PLAN THRUST

In the Far North on the Petsamo front there were signs that the Russians were preparing for a new major offensive as soon as the weather permits. Russian planes in that area subjected Finnish communications to severe bombing assaults.

On the Salla front two Russian divisions were reported still holding out and some reports stated they were advancing. Finnish patrols there were reported concentrating on hand-grenade attacks against Soviet field kitchens.

The two divisions of Russians on the Salla front were described in dispatches as crack Soviet effectives from the Ukraine, well trained and equipped and far superior to any other Soviet forces seen in Finland.

RUSSIANS DIG IN

They have dug in, these reports said, and are defending themselves vigorously against Finnish attacks. Soviet artillery, moreover, has been withdrawn from the Salla front, probably to prevent it from being captured by Finnish ski raiders.

The Soviet air raids covered most of southern Finland. In Turko alone 200 bombs were dropped.

Everywhere, it was stated, the Russians droped equal quantities of high explosives and incendiary oombs.

Twenty-one Russian planes bombed Viborg several times, dropping a score of 500-pound bombs and many smaller ones. Ten houses were burned and ten others destroyed. The number of killed and wounded was not learned.

After the attacks fire brigades extinguished the flames. One family alone lost four houses and two business buildings.

Other cities which suffered were Bjoerkoe, Humaljoki and Wasa, where eight were killed and many wounded.

In Viborg, volunteers cleared the streets of wreckage and aided in removal of the wounded to hospitals.

Store windows were shattered by the explosions in the raids, which continued for three hours.

Authorities in Helsinki expressed the view that the Russians were trying to conquer Finland by a campaign of terror following the Soviet military defeats on the eastern front.

Official statistics of last week's air bombings stated that 400 Russian planes roared over the country on several days in succession, dropping 2000 bombs on 42 different localities, many of which were raided several times.

Statistics showed 18 persons killed and 93 injured, most of them women of working class districts.

Aaland island was bombed but the damage there was small, the announcement said, adding that the number of Russian planes shot down exceeded the number of Finns killed.

Four Subs Destroyed

had tried to emulate the feat of Lieut. Guenther Prien of the German Navy, who nosed his U-boat into Britain's chief naval concentration base at Scapa Flow and sank the battleship Royal Oak.

It is doubtful whether any German ships comparable to the Royal Oak are in Helgoland bight, but the submarine commanders may have hoped to find a cruiser or two anchored in the roadstead, or perhaps come across the pocket battleships Deutschland or Admiral Scheer.

Equally likely was the possibility that the three submersibles had been sent to Helgoland to lay mines, perhaps in sufficient number to bottle up whatever German warships are at Helgoland.

All inquiries regarding actual details were answered with polite refusals.

MILLION-DOLLAR BOATS

The loss of the three submarines was the greatest blow suffered by the British navy since the German pocket battleship Deutschland sank the armed British raider Rawalpindi with a loss of 280 lives Nov. 25.

Each of the three submarines cost aproximately $1,000,000.

The Undine was a sister ship of the Ursula, which the British said a month ago sank a German cruiser of the Koeln class on Dec. 14.

Apparently the Undine and Starfish were working as a team as did the Salmon and the Ursula.

The admiralty reported that the Salmon sank a German submarine Dec. 12, let the liner Bremen pass the same day rather than attack without warning, and the next day struck the 6000-ton German cruiser Leipzig and another German cruiser with torpedoes.

Last night the British announced a salvo of bombs from a British airplane was believed to have sunk a German submarine in the North sea. A patch of grease and bubbles rose after the bombs were dropped, the announcement said.

GERMAN SEA LOSSES

The admiralty has acknowledged the loss of the submarine Oxley, victim of an explosion the first week of the war, but insisted this was not due to enemy action. Four officers and 49 men were lost with the Oxley.

Meanwhile French naval officials in Paris said a French patrol ship had attacked a German submarine "with great chances of success." Conclusive evidence of the U-boat's destruction was lacking, however.

The French admiralty announced a German freighter had been scuttled by her own crew to avoid capture when intercepted by a French warship. The name of the freighter was believed to be the Janus.

CHEST COLDS
COUGHING COLDS
STUBBORN HEAD COLDS

Don't keep on suffering, day after day, from the stuffiness, coughing, soreness and muscular tightness of a cold without doing something about it.

A cold is bad for you—bad for those around you, too. What's more, you can't trust the simplest little cold not to grow worse.

Do As Millions Do

So do what millions of people do. Have on hand a jar of Vicks VapoRub—the famous poultice-vapor treatment you can depend on to relieve miseries of chest colds, nasty coughing colds and stubborn head colds.

You can use VapoRub in so many ways. It acts to relieve miseries like a good old-fashioned poultice. Also, its medicated vapors are breathed into cold-irritated air passages to help relieve the congestion and loosen phlegm. And, when you melt it in boiling water, it gives you a marvelous medicated vapor-steam treatment.

These simple VapoRub treatments are standbys in millions of homes—used whenever colds strike. More people use the poultice and vapor action of VapoRub than all similar treatments combined. Follow the full tested directions that come with every jar of VapoRub.

AMERICAS INSIST ON WAR BAN

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 16 (AP) – Faced with Great Britain's rejection of the 300-mile American safety zone an inter-American neutrality committee today sought concrete means of enforcing the "keep out" sign for all belligerents.

Despite Britain's note describing the zone as "ineffective," Prof. Charles Fenwick, United States representative on the committee representing 21 republics, said in an interview:

"We have privileges which both sides want which we could deny if they (the belligerents) adopt a refractory attitude. We believe through history the belligerents had their way too long in extending the war to every quarter of the globe."

The committee, consisting of seven experts named by the Pan American Union governing board, had for consideration in its closed session today the following proposals to enforce the zone:

1—An agreement o. the Republics to prevent belligerent warships from obtaining supplies or making ship repairs in Pan American ports after they have committed acts of war inside the zone.

2—An agreement to prevent merchant ships from taking supplies from Pan American ports to belligerent ships inside the zone.

3—An accord to ban submarines from entering Pan American harbors.

4—Co-ordination of interpretations of international law relating to neutrality into a Pan American neutrality code.

Fenwick, professor of international law at Bryn Mawr College, said he did not propose that American republics "fight for the right to be neutral," but declared that belligerents could be kept out if the republics united on means of enforcing the zone.

American Brigade Battling for Finns

LONDON, Jan. 16 (INS)—Existence in Finland of an "American Brigade" was reported by Geoffrey Cox in a dispatch to the London Daily Express today from "somewhere in Finland."

Cox reported that he had watched the brigade in training and quoted one of its members, Arthur Williams of the Bronx, New York, a house painter, as saying:

"I said to my wife the night before the Finnish war started:

"'I'm going to get up 10 minutes earlier tomorrow and hear the first news broadcast. There's going to be trouble.'

"The announcer said: 'Good morning, everybody! Here are the headlines today: Russia invades Finland by land, sea and air.' I turned to my wife and said:

"'I'm off!'

"I managed to get the Russian Jew who was my boss to give $25 to the Finnish relief fund before I left."

Lawrence Heidemann, 27, of Detroit, Mich., another member of the brigade, was quoted as saying:

"When the war broke out I was in Helsinki on a vacation and a study tour.

"I saw the first bombs fall. First, I said to myself:

"'This is not my business. My father is a Finn, but my life lies in the United States.'

"So I let the American legation evacuate me to Stockholm. There suddenly I saw things differently and came back. It's my fight."

Britain Claims Gain in Tankers

LONDON, Jan. 16 (AP)—The British tanker tonnage has gained since the war began, the admiralty reported today, denying a German radio broadcast that 26 tankers had been lost.

The report said losses actually were less than half that number.

For the week ended Jan. 13, twelve British ships totalling 34,077 tons and four neutrals totalling 7792 were sunk by enemy action, it said. Allied and neutral ships convoyed up to Jan. 10 totalled 6363 with 12 lost.

The admiralty listed two German ships sunk during the past week, the Bahia Blanca, 8558 tons, by an iceberg off Iceland, and the Dietrich Hasseldick, 172 tons, by an explosion.

SWEDES, NORSE FLAY REDS' BOMBING RAIDS

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 16 (INS)—Friction between Soviet Russia on one hand and Sweden and Norway on the other mounted today as the two Scandinavian states sent protests to Moscow against alleged Russian aerial violations of their neutral territory.

The Norwegian government at Oslo announced its Moscow legation had been instructed to protest against the flight of about 30 Soviet warplanes over Norway's northern Pasvik district on Friday.

It was charged that one of the Russian planes landed in Norwegian territory.

At the same time the Stockholm foreign office announced its minister at Moscow was ordered to protest against the Soviet raid over the Swedish island of Kalla, during which nine bombs were dropped.

At the same time Sweden and Norway let it be known they would not bow to Soviet pressure to halt aid to Finland. Norway, however, was believed considering concessions to Russia regarding aid to the Finns as a means of easing the tension.

Swedish and Norwegian help to Finland drew stiff Soviet protests, to which both countries replied by contending their actions were fully in accordance with international law.

They also held that the Russian accusations of non-neutrality were "wholly unfounded." This attitude was unanimously supported by the Swedish and Norwegian press. The Russian charges were denied and the Moscow protests rejected.

This drew a semi-official Soviet announcement that the replies from Oslo and Stockholm were "unsatisfactory."

DIVER MAY SEEK 3 BOYS' BODIES

ave. His condition is such that he was anointed by the Rev. John Mack, hospital chaplain.

The Whitehouse brothers died in each other's arms. John Whitehouse, another brother, who escaped, said his last view of them was when he saw them struggling in the water.

John Harris, of Sterling sq., who was released from Carney Hospital after treatment, told his mother that he had seen one of the Whitehouse boys fall from the ice into the water and the elder brother try to rescue him. The younger brother pulled him in and both went under, he said.

Joseph Murphy, Jr., of O'Callaghan Way, corroborated this statement. Ralph Whitehouse drowned before his eyes, he said.

Boys who escaped the fate of their less fortunate companions but were treated at Carney Hospital included: John Gallagher, 15, Joseph Cullinane, 14, John Culhane, 13, all of Logan Way; Edward Jarvis, 8, of Dorchester ave., Joseph Murphy, 14, of O'Callaghan Way.

Pacing the beach until a late hour last night were the fathers of the missing boys. Mrs. Whitehouse, mother of two missing sons, was so deeply affected she was placed in the care of a physician.

Diver Wallace, hero of many undersea adventures, went down several times trying to find the body of Joseph Curry before it was discovered 600 feet out and almost directly opposite the foot of Byron st., East Boston.

The boys had been enjoying the sport of running "tiddlies," paddling ice floes and jumping from one cake to another when the receding tide took their rotting floats toward the sea.

STUCK IN THE MUD

A field of ice had been broken into large pieces and driven inshore by the waves, whipped by the easterly storm during the night. The boys had not reckoned on the turn of the tide which would bear them out to sea. When it came they began to leap from one floe to another.

Some of these ice cakes tilted under their weight and plunged them into the water. Curry, playing with his brother John, and seven other companions, slipped in trying to make a leap from one cake to another and went under the ice to his death. He never came up.

John Cloyton, 14, of Byron st., East Boston, tried to pull young Curry up by his clothing but the boy was held fast in the mud. His father and mother were near collapse when the body was finally recovered about 600 feet from shore.

An aunt of the boy's was married Sunday and the Woodsworth st. house was a house of joy. But last night it was a house of grief.

Young Curry left three brothers and a sister to mourn him besides his parents. His body was recovered by Chester Barnard, 48, of Coleridge st., John McGunnigle, 35, and Walter Bagley, 27, of Cowper st., all of East Boston.

Much of the credit for the rescue of many of the boys was given to Special Officer John J. Garrett. He was enjoying a day off at the South Boston Yacht Club, realized the danger the boys were in and called upon the police to aid them.

Then he commandeered the William R. Coleman, city institutions boat, and with officers rushed from the South Boston and Field's Corner station set out to the rescue as a throng of spectators gathered along shore.

First to be rescued, about 600 yards off City Point Headhouse, was Joseph Murphy. The boy had flung himself face down on the ice and was clinging grimly to the cake, his hands frostbitten and his clothing drenched by spray.

HAULED ABOARD

A rope was lowered with a loop in the end, and young Murphy was able to put it under his arms and was hauled aboard the Coleman.

Meantime James Perry of Boston st., Henry Kane of Elder st., and Thomas Collins of Mt. Vernon st., all Dorchester, were standing at Carson Beach when they saw an ice cake break away carrying a small boy with it.

They raced two and a half miles to the Public Landing, obtained a rowboat and putting out in it, rescued John Gallagher, who had slipped from his precarious position twice but each time managed to haul himself back.

He was transferred to the Coleman, which then picked up Joseph Cullinane and John Culhane from a cake which had floated half a mile off Mile Road and was moving rapidly towards Neponset.

Robert Crowell, 11, of Old Colony ave., was clinging to an ice cake, breaking under his fingers when he was snatched from death by four youths in a rowboat. He had swallowed much water and was on the verge of collapse.

The four boys responsible for his safety were Leo Stafford, 16, of Willow ct.; Paul McCarthy, 17, of East Eighth st.; Anthony Rossi, 18, of Sanger st., and James Donovan, 16, of East Eighth st. They used the prone pressure method of resuscitation as they headed the boat toward shore.

On the way back they pulled a second youth into the dory, John Harris, 11, of Sterling st., South Boston. He was so frightened he ran all the way home.

son of a rich lumberman, is the father of Miss Bennett's daughter, Diana, 11. He and the actress were married in London Sept. 15, 1926, and divorced Aug. 1, 1928.

Three years ago he appeared in court in an unsuccessful effort to block her request that the daughter's name be changed from Adrienne Bennett Fox to Diana Bennett Markey.

Miss Bennett at that time was married to Gene Markey, film writer now the husband of actress Hedy Lamarr.

Referring to Markey at that time, Miss Bennett testified:

"He is the only father the little girl has ever known. Mr. Fox abandoned me and the baby when the baby was a few months old.

"I think it proper that she should have the same name as her sister in going to school."

The sister is Melinda Markey, now five.

Fox admitted he had never supported the child, but said:

"I should like to have her know me as her father. I know it doesn't make for harmony in the Markey home, but I think she will not have to contend with the fact that I'm her father but will come to be proud of the fact."

He attributed his divorce from Miss Bennett to his fondness for alcohol, but contended he had given up drinking.

Bus, Auto Crash, 14 Shaken, 1 Hurt

An autoist was injured and 14 Boston Elevated bus passengers shaken today in the second Cambridge El bus accident in 24 hours.

Today's crash occurred at Peabody and Church sts., where a Lechmere-Harvard bus was in collision with an auto operated, according to police, by Clifton Parsons, 27, of Fayette st., Cambridge.

Parsons was taken to Cambridge City Hospital, suffering from injuries to his left leg and knee.

The bus was operated by John J. Sullivan of Thorndike st., Arlington.

He escaped injury, as did 14 passengers.

In yesterday's bus accident, which occurred at Western ave. and Putnam ave., Cambridge, one man was injured, an oil truck was overturned and 47 bus passengers imperilled.

A Black-out For Gray Hair

It is now just about as easy to "black-out" graying hair as it is to make up your face, giving it the same touch of youth. You can't go wrong if you will follow the simple directions given with the Barbo recipe below.

Get from your druggist one ounce bay rum; one-fourth ounce glycerine; one box Barbo Compound. Mix in half pint of water, or your druggist will mix for you at small cost. Simply comb into the hair several times a week. A rich, natural-looking color is imparted to gray, streaked hair. This color is easily maintained; will not wash out; rub off; or affect permanents. Does not stain the scalp; is not sticky or greasy and leaves the hair soft and glossy. Try the money-saving Barbo recipe today and see how many years younger you will look.

McNutt in Hub, Sees 90 Billion U.S. Income

Foreseeing a $90,000,000,000 U. S. national income with unemployment a "negligible" problem, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt urged today that government and business ally themselves in a "co-operative program to detect the most promising areas for investment and expansion."

PAUL V. McNUTT
Sees Prosperity Ahead

He told Boston Chamber of Commerce luncheon guests:

"Business hazards in times like ours are great. The individual is often unable to determine accurately the fields where investment opportunities are sound enough to afford a reasonable expectation of an adequate return.

GOVERNMENT CAN AID

"Here is a situation where the government is in a position to assist business. It can act as a clearing house for information, plans and the development of a unified program.

"It can act as a co-ordinator for different lines of business and industry as well as an investigating agent for the discovery of new frontiers on which private enterprise can concentrate in the task of raising living standards."

Deftly dodging interviewers' questions regarding his "if" candidacy for the presidency, McNutt said finally:

WAITS F. D.'s DECISION

"I want it clearly understood I am not campaigning for anything. This is not a political barnstorming trip.

"My friends may be campaigning for me. But that is their responsibility. The President's decision is what will finally make my decision."

The handsome, silver-haired former U. S. commissioner for the Philippines was a debonair figure as he received newspapermen at the Copley-Plaza for a general press interview.

Natty in blue suit, maroon tie, dark tan shoes and spats, Administrator McNutt showed no evidence of having collaborated as yet with his presidential backers who began a quiet drive some time ago to "de-pretty" him in interests of his national reputation.

U. S. foreign policies will be a principal issue in the coming national election, McNutt predicted.

MUST "GET OFF FENCE"

He said the time has come when the U. S. must "get off the fence" in regard to its intentions in the Far East.

"We must decide to stay in the East or get out," he said. "If we must keep the Philippines within our sphere of influence and establish necessary bases, such as that at Guam, fortifying them adequately.

"But this policy is one that should be determined by the American people, not by the administration at Washington."

After his Chamber of Commerce luncheon here today, Administrator McNutt planned a conference with New England Social Security heads, then planned to fly to Washington.

He is to confer there with President Roosevelt tomorrow morning, at the President's request.

McNutt told Chamber of Commerce members the U. S. national income has already risen from the depression low of $42,000,000,000 a year to a present level of $72,000,000,000 a year and "will soon touch $80,000,000,000."

Jail Terms Hinge On Auto Keys

Until the Supreme Court decides whether automobile keys are "burglarious instruments," James B Tillel, 28, of Brunswick st., and Benjamin Carro, 28, of Havelock st., Dorchester, will not start sentences of three to five years at State Prison, Judge Harold P. Williams ruled in Suffolk Superior Court today.

The men were found guilty of having burglars' tools in their possession. When arrested last September by Sgt. John Holmes, in Blue Hill ave., Dorchester they were acting suspiciously near a number of salesmen's automobiles, it was testified during their trial.

Both men have long records dating back to 1918. Judge Williams granted a stay of sentence until their counsel, Atty. Max Glazier, appeals to the Supreme Court in an effort to prove automobile keys are not "burglarious instruments."

A two-ton truck, carrying assorted vegetables, and a 20-ton locomotive met head-on at the First st., South Boston, crossing today and the result was a giant "salad."

Nobody hurt, but the truck, New Haven officials said, was badly damaged and vegetables were strewn for 50 feet.

The truck had started up suddenly in gear, it was reported, and crossed the path of the slow-moving locomotive pulling freight cars.

Quads 'Awful Shock' To Dad in Alabama

JASPER, Ala., Jan. 16 (INS)—"It was an awful shock—I'd been expecting twins."

Thus did Cylde Short, an Alabama sharecropper and part-time miner, give an inkling today how it feels to be the father of quadruplets.

Mrs. Short gave birth to three girls and a boy Sunday night under almost primitive conditions in the small house on the farm the Shorts rent at Nauvoo just west of Jasper.

Although today Mrs. Short who is 32 and the mother of five other children, was receiving the best of care at the Walker County Hospital in Jasper, where her four infants were reported to be "doing fine" in incubators, the births occurred under dim oil conditions.

Dr H J Sankey, the attending physician had to work from his car to keep the babies alive. An open grate fire was the only source of heat. A kerosene lamp furnished the only light.

Dr Sankey worked with the mother and quads throughout the night, keeping the babies wrapped as warmly as possible in blankets and whatever covering was offered. On Monday Mrs. Short and the babies were brought to the Jasper Hospital. The four infants weighed about three pounds each.

Authorities said the quads were the first to be born in Alabama. The girls were named Faith, Hope and Charity. The boy has not yet been named.

"We figured there was more than one on the way," the father told reporters. "But four! Gosh, that sure was a surprise."

DOWD DEFENDED BY WIFE

lucky units of society paid penance to the same master? A stern, eye-for-an-eye master this time! Yes, what about them?

Exactly twice were "parties" held in the sheriff's house while Mr. and Mrs. John F. Dowd were master and mistress of the dwelling, Mrs. Dowd said. If there had been more, she is sure she would have remembered.

One of these events was in celebration of March 17 . . .

ONE PARTY FOR HER

The other "party" was in honor of Mrs. Dowd's birthday, and again it was "nothing elaborate." Relatives and friends were the guests on this occasion, also.

"But there was very little drinking," asserted Mrs. Dowd. "The men drank beer, and the supply of liquor and beer was so small that Johnnie sent to a small package store not far from the jail. And that 'ebony bar' which has been described. I wish you could see it."

"Two old filing boxes, it was. That was the bar," her mother said.

"John had these old pieces of furniture fixed up with a coat of shellac, and the result was the expensive bar you have heard described," Mrs. Dowd continued. She shook her head slowly. "Didn't they charge that John had paid out of county money for the installation of a bar for his home? Well, the truth is that the filing cases came from the old court house."

"Yes," added Mrs. McConnell, "and for awhile my son-in-law kept papers and letters in the boxes."

THE QUINN-DOLAN STORY

And now follows a definite denial of accusations which at first took the form of hints by the missing sheriff's biographers pro tem, and later became outright charges and later became outright charges as the days went by and the heckled sheriff remained among the missing.

These accusations placed Edmund L. Dolan, and J. Walter Quinn, perhaps the most widely-known "guests" of the Charles Street institution, at "parties" in the sheriff's house.

"Eddie Dolan and Wally Quinn were never in the house—not once," Mrs. Dowd averred. "They certainly weren't dined or wined or entertained in my presence, and if they had been visitors in my absence I would have heard about it."

But about those "parties" at which unidentified "blondes" were present, and when the "bubbly," or champagne, was supposed to have flowed. If champagne flowed—it flowed like glue, according to Mrs. Dowd's testimony.

CHAMPAGNE? ONE BOTTLE

"Champagne—one bottle of it—was served at our house just once," the wife of John F. Dowd said.

"The guests were three men who came to question my husband about reports of an investigation that were just starting to be rumored."

Mrs. Dowd paused to accept a cigarette. She smokes awkwardly, from lack of experience. By her testimony, she had never taken a whiff of a cigarette in her whole life until the storm clouds were gathering over the Charles Street Jail, and when, to try to compose her nerves, she decided to have a fling at this vouchsafed method of self-quieting. (It hasn't worked)

SOUNDS BITTER NOTE

"So we served champagne. The reason was that we didn't have a drink of liquor in the house," Mrs. Dowd went on. "I fly, and I am sorry to say, bitters the gentleman who took the first drink of my only bottle of wine has taken the lead in supplying the public with lies about my John.

There were tears again, and she daubed the corners of her eyes.

"'Is there a drink around the house for these fellows?' John asked me. I told him I didn't think there was, and I explored the cupboard of the dining room and I was right.

"Then I came across the bottle of champagne, and told John I had it. It wasn't even cold. But that didn't make any difference.

"I set the bottle on the table, with some goblets. John opened it and got some ice. That was the champagne party! And the only one in the months we lived in that house."

'WISE BOYS" BUSY

Great public hunts, like the chase of John F. Dowd by several agencies of the law, draw their Monday morning quarterbacks no less decidedly than crucial football contests.

From Jim Purcell's to Jimmy O'Keefe's, from "The Hall" to the State House (via the Parker House bar and grill and the Bellevue's cafeteria) the Dowd case has given the wise boys a sterling test of their prognosticating skill.

In early November, days before the resignation of Sheriff Dowd was relayed to Gov. Saltonstall, the dopesters were calling their shots in the Dowd case. So-and-so will talk. So-and-so may "stand up" (not talk) Dowd will resign. He'll scram. He has plenty of money. And he won't come back until the 'heat is over" here!

WHAT IS "THE HEAT?"

That's the way the "experts" have 'doped it." And what do they mean by "heat?"

When the newspapers are making a fuss and district attorneys and the police are making statements—that is "the heat."

Some of the wiseboys went so far to predict that Dowd will not surrender while "the heat is on," that until the cry subsides he will stay wherever he is, and—further (and this concerns us somewhat)—something would be done "to soften things up."

Such a "something" could be a story like this, the story of Mrs. John F. Dowd, and a presentation, for the first time since the case exploded, of a few words "favorable" to the defense. The "dopesters," you see, have given the matter thorough study.

"NO PICTURES"

So has May Dowd. For two full months she has shrunk from blows aimed at husband (and when he goes down she goes with him) yet the girl has "taken" it.

Yet she fought against the printing of even this much of the other side of the Dowd story.

Even now she will not pose for a photograph.

When I said above that this harried lady was a nearly-perfect subject for an interview—about the Dowd case at any rate—I can now give you an instance of how she, in chorus with the "experts" on the sidelines, has anticipated most of the results of all the switches of the case.

"Anything I say will be taken as a plea for sympathy, and an effort to lighten John's load. It will be said we are begging for public favor. I know it will, and this isn't true.

"Please try to make it understood."

That wasn't a bad sizeup of such an unimportant sidelight on the Dowd case as this unpretentious transcribing of Mary Dowd's words.

THE WISE BOYS SAY

You could hear in City Hall plaand along the counters in Thompson's Spa some similar sporadic opinions.

"Yeah, the works are in, now," you might have heard yesterday.

"Did you read Mrs. Dowd's story? They're softening things up so Dowd can give himself up."

The cynics, in numbers rivaling the poor, will be always with us.

Something else Mrs. Dowd predicted, however, found no concurrence from this side of the table.

"I'm afraid that they will say I am selling my story, and that wouldn't do John any good, would it?" Mrs. Dowd observed once.

Of course, there are rivalries in the newspaper business. Ordinarily, however, they rise above the petty, and the genus newspaperman—strange creature—is such, that after the heat of battle, toasts all-around settle things neatly, and tolerantly, in what becomes gradually a mellow atmosphere. All this away—ordinarily—from public view!

SPIKING THAT GOSSIP

Your correspondent, frankly, could not bring himself to believe that the charge would be made that Mrs. Dowd would sell her story. Let us spike it now—just in case.

It's my word against the field.

For the sake of fairness, take mine. Take the truth.

Not as much as the price of a dinner has been contributed to inveigh for the "own story" of Mrs. John F. Dowd.

And, with a request for your indulgence at the foregoing intrusion, we come to the question:

"Will John F. Dowd give himself up?"

His wife says: "Yes."

WANTS FAIR TRIAL

"John will come back and defend himself. I do not know when. From one source which he has always distrusted, a campaign against him has been carried on so violently that we really think it amounts to persecution.

"It makes no difference that this fellow was one of his backslappers when he was in. He has been vicious, absolutely vicious.

"Why, one of the first remarks I heard when I came home was that John's case has been given more publicity than if he were a murderer!

"You would think it was the Millen-Faber trial all over again.

"In the face of this terrible publicity, do you think it would be wise for a man to deliver himself over to the authorities—unless he had to?"

"It is impossible to forget that a jury is drawn from the public and that jurymen have to be able to read. How possibly could a man have read what has been written about John and not prejudge the case."

She made her own answer, and she sobbed a little as she made it.

"It would be impossible. John is guilty in everybody's mind."

DENIES JAIL LAXITY

Except, you may be sure, in the mind of his wife.

What about this laxity in the operation of the jailhouse over which John F. Dowd presided? What about these stories of male inmates being permitted to mix with the inmates of the opposite sex?

Nothing of the sort ever happened, Mrs. Dowd admits—and she made the admission with a toss of her head and a return of sparkle to her eyes—that certain changes, oper to criticism perhaps, were made during the administration of her husband.

One was that women prisoners were served dessert the very first Sunday of the Dowd regime.

"I recall positively what the first Sunday dessert course was," she said. "It was apple-pie—with ice cream." Mrs. Dowd does not "put on the dog." She could have called it "apple pie a la mode."

(Another revealing installment of George Holland's exclusive interview with Mrs. John F. Dowd will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Tague Son, Legion Chief Named Deputy Sheriffs

Sheriff Frederick R. Sullivan today appointed Peter F. Tague, Jr., son of the Boston postmaster, and William J. McMorrow, 43-year-old Suffolk County commander of the American Legion, as deputy sheriffs to serve legal writs.

They replace Deputies Joseph Griffin, former campaign manager for the fugitive ex-Sheriff John F. Dowd, and Frank Pedonti, who was a former secretary for ex-Governor James M. Curley.

The Griffin and Pedonti commissions expired today, both having been appointed by Dowd. Other deputies have been reappointed without terms, subject to the approval of Sheriff Sullivan.

Tague is 34 years old, is single and lives with his parents in Monument sq., Charlestown. He is a former deputy United States marshal and attended Boston Latin School and Georgetown University.

McMorrow, former commander of West Roxbury Post, A. L., served overseas two years during the World War. Formerly in the shoe business in downtown Boston, he lives in Corey st., West Roxbury, and is the father of four boys.

QUESTION

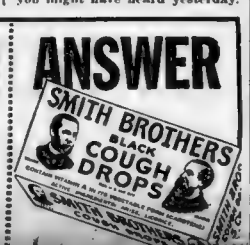
(CAROTENE)

ANSWER



SAD MOTHER BEGS WORD FROM DOWD

By JAMES F. McENANEY

From the trembling lips of his aged, weeping mother today came a plea to her missing son, the fugitive former Sheriff John F. Dowd, to let her know he is alive—if he is alive.

No one else will tell her if he is alive or dead, the 75-year-old woman sobbed as she told her side of the story, for the first time to anyone.

She is confined, because of ill health, to the apartment she and her daughter occupy on the fourth floor at Riverway and Huntington ave. She can barely walk from room to room, but she does not want to walk much.

NO WORD OF SON

Usually she just sits at the window and stares at the traffic outside, cars coming and going—perhaps some coming from the city where her missing son may be.

"I haven't been able to sleep ever since Johnny went away," she said. "I wish to God I knew whether he is alive or dead.

"I haven't heard from him since he went away—and not even from his own wife."

The daughter—Dowd's sister, Mrs. Kathleen Novello, a courthouse employe who is supporting the aged woman—broke in when the mother's tears came.

"Johnny has never contributed to the support of his mother during the past two or three years," said the sister bitterly.

"Stories that said he had made sure his mother was financially fixed before he left are a lot of lies.

"I have to work to keep mother here; to keep this place going."

The mother's hands twisted in her as she gazed out the window.

FEARS HE IS SICK

"At least," she said, more composedly, "I should be among the first to be considered in being told how Johnny is; if he is all right.

"I myself am not able to get out or to get around.

"He may be sick somewhere, or he may be dead. It's for that reason that I'm constantly worrying. It will drive me to my grave if I don't hear.

"My only wish is that Johnny will get in touch with me, either himself or through someone, if he is still alive or is all right.

"If he hasn't any other friend, he knows he has always one in me.

"The little bit that I had of my own has been spent, but thank God J—'s welcome here with his mother at least. But I don't want it said that he's been sending any money to his mother."

TWA Seeks Boston, Pacific Plane Permit

Application for a permit to extend its coast-to-coast system to Boston was filed in Washington today by Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc. Should such extension be allowed, the flying time from Boston to California would be cut one hour, the petition set forth.

The application requested authorization for TWA to inaugurate service on a new 505-mile route, extending from Pittsburgh through Williamsport, Pa., Binghamton, N. Y., and Springfield, to Boston. At Pittsburgh the route would connect with TWA's present main line from New York to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Foley Sure Dowd Still in Country

New information that shows the fugitive ex-Sheriff John F. Dowd is still in this country was claimed by Dist. Atty. William J. Foley today.

Foley said he was in communication with New York authorities and expected to have a quick "break" in the long hunt for the fugitive.

Foley and Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle today questioned Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Donahue, of Milton, and their daughter Mary, 16, but the relatives could not furnish any clues to Dowd's present whereabouts.

They told him Mr. and Mrs. Dowd had spent the last four or five days before his disappearance on Nov. 20 at the Donahue home.

They said Dowd had several callers but they were unable to say who the callers were.

Claim Teacher Beat Chewing Gum Girl

SOUTH CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Jan. 16 (AP)—Charges of abusing a 17-year-old girl student due to a chewing gum incident today brought about suspension of John Snader, 40, junior high school principal.

The school board announced his removal pending a "complete and impartial investigation," but emphasized that the action "does not constitute any admission of any charges nor will it result in any suspension of salary at this time."

Snader told the board members that he had attempted to punish Josephine Edenbo last Friday for chewing gum and falsifying about it and that when she fought back it was a question of self defense.

"I slapped her face—lightly," said the unmarried principal. "I turned to go. Then she landed a haymaker on my cheek.

"I thought the side of the building had caved in. Then I slapped her face three or four times—both sides. She tripped over a chair and sat down on the floor with a thump."

The student charged:

"He hit me in the face several times. Skating tickets and other articles in my pocketbook were scattered about when he knocked me down. And he hit me while I was down, too.

"As he grabbed me by the wrist I warned him not to break my watch or he would have to pay for it. I got in one good right sock to the jaw and he turned deathly pale."

About 30 students who sided with Josephine stayed outside after the noon recess but 10 of them later returned to class.

A crowd of residents milled about the building where the board met and President Ralph Miller reported its size "prompted the board to go into executive session for a thorough and impartial" inquiry.

What do you read BETWEEN THE LINES?

Between the lines of every advertisement you see, you can imagine these words:

"Thousands of people had to believe in this product —and buy it—before it was ready for advertising!"

The fact that a product is advertised regularly means that a lot of people buy it regularly. The fact that a storekeeper or manufacturer will join his name with it in public proves that he thinks it is good, honest value.

Time was when the slogan, "Let the buyer beware," governed buying and selling. But advertising has reversed that. Today it reads, "Let the seller beware!"

For if his goods don't measure up, he loses out to advertised products that do!

'Dead Enders' On Boston Stage

Starting a week from Friday, RKO Boston management will initiate something new and interesting in show business when it designates a week out of each month as "The Show of the Month Week," during which a distinctive stage and screen program will be presented.

"The Dead End Kids," who started as pint-sied baddies in the screen version of "Dead End," have been chosen for the first big "Show of the Month" bill. Appearing with them will be Sam Hearn, the "Schlepperman" of Jack Benny's radio program.

The boys, in case you have forgotten their names, are Leo "Spit" Gorcey, Hunts "Fippy" Hall, Gabriel "T. B." Dell and Bernard "Milty" Punsley. For their initial personal appearance locally they will have a large supporting cast.

Oddest Fan Mail To 'Film' Blondie

Hollywood's oddest fan mail is addressed to Penny Singleton, the Blondie of Columbia's domestic comedy series adapted from the Hearst comic strip, "Blondie."

To her come requests for information on babies; the secret of her coiffure; the best method of applying mustard plasters; the way to keep a husband in line; questions concerning recipes and relatives; requests for beauty secrets and household tips.

As the happy wife and mother in the "Blondie" series, she is a feminine Petronius of Hollywood, the film capital's arbiter for wives. And she loves it!

"Most of the letters," she says, "are sensible—all of them are interesting. I've learned more about the average American home from these letters than seems possible. What's more, they've helped me in my characterization."

Hollywood Paragraphs

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 16—The happiest news I've had since I came home is word direct from Warner Brothers that Jane Wyman is to have the femme lead opposite Edward G. Robinson in "Brother Orchid" and Ronald Reagan the chief romantic interest.

The best part Jane ever had, they tell me, and let me say right here that Jane deserves it. I'd like to see that all of my youngsters get a break for they proved they are good troupers, and Jane has talent.

All she and Ronnie need is a chance, and I am grateful that Hal Wallis and Jack Warner realize it. If they could have heard the applause they got every time they stepped on the stage they'd know just how Mr. and Mrs. Public and the little Publics like these two as motion picture entertainers.

Returning on the Santa Fe Chief with us were the Jean Hersholts, back from six New York broadcasts of "Dr. Christian." Jean has agreed to return to 20th Century-Fox for another Quint movie, and while in New York he discussed the young ladies with their friend and mentor, Dr. Allen Dafoe.

I dined with the doctor twice," said Jean, "and while he is no longer officially their guardian, he is still the doctor of the five little girls and responsible for their physical welfare. If the children are permitted to be at the New York World's Fair this summer the movie will be made there. That ought to please Mayor LaGuardia who is really doing his best to have a certain percentage of movies made in the big town."

'TWO ON AN ISLAND' DELIGHTS IN WILBUR PREMIERE

Stage Sets Win Praise of All

By PEGGY DOYLE

Without disturbing a gat, a girder or a gigolo, Dramatist Elmer Rice brought Broadway, the Bowery, the Village and even the Little Old Lady herself to Boston last night, providing a Wilbur Theater audience with the best "rubberneck" ride in its experience.

It was the occasion of the pre-New York opening of Mr. Rice's newest and the Playwrights' third production of the season, "Two On An Island."

As we have so broadly indicated, there is nothing Tahitian or deserted about the island upon which Betty Field and John Craven, the "two" of Mr. Rice's play, find themselves stranded in the teeming midst of seven million or so tycoons and wage-slaves.

From the rise of the curtain on the first-scene dialogue between Taxi-drivers William Flynn and Samuel Brodsky and their respective outlander passengers and Jo Mielziner's equally eloquent stage set, it is unmistakeable that this "island" is the fabulous Manhattan.

By means of a revolving stage (the kind that would have prolonged the run of Orson Welles' "Five Kings" by speeding up its final curtain), Mr. Rice's second scene transports you around the town in a sightseeing bus. There isn't a shill in Sightseeing Guide Howard daSilva's carload of Equity members. Between his own brassiness and the spiel provided him by the newly elected president of the Dramatists' Guild, daSilva doesn't require any shills, thank you so kindly.

In less time than it takes to type it, New Hampshire's Miss Field and Iowa's cornfed Craven have bearded the wolf of Broadway, Luther Adler, in his streamlined den.

Lobby-lizards were pinning the Adler characterization on Broadway's Jed Harris. We wouldn't know—but it doesn't matter. Sylvia Sidney's husband and the Group Theater's one-time leading man again demonstrated his brilliance. His Broadway producer, who has his feet in the box-office and his head in the clouds, is as real as your next income tax payment.

All "Producer" Adler wants is a young George Arliss with sex appeal. Mr. Craven regrets all he's got is a play to sell to some lucky producer. As for the dewy, but gusty Miss Field she'd rather be Helen Hayes, she tells the sheep-skinned biggie, than be President. Well, it isn't until the tenth and penultimate scene that these three meet on the same plane. And then, it is one of those unprepossessing of all-in-one cre-roomers, but its bleakness illumined only by Betty Field's bright playing.

Too much can't be said for the Mielziner's stage sets, all of them as tersely expressive as a Thurber drawing. They co-operate eloquently with Mr. Rice's script in taking you behind Manhattan's Venetian blinds and a pseudo-panhandler's "cupacawfee" needs.

In the second act, the going begins in the subway, proceeds to Greenwich Village and its Coffee-Pot-quick-lunchety, the Metropolitan Museum and then leaves you at the entrance to the Silver Bar.

It's a small world after all, the boy from Iowa and the girl from New Hampshire (who have crossed glances 'way back in the first act) agree when they meet and talk together on top of the Statue of Liberty.

He had $50 and she had $6 to lend him and a little more. Riches for them, but Mr. Rice decided they could better afford a love nest than a wedding ring and fixings. It was left for the Broadway wolf, albeit unwittingly, to make the book, ring and bell ceremony actuality. Personally, we think it would have been in better taste had Mr. Rice taken care of this detail himself—but earlier. Otherwise, we enjoyed the "ride."

SOUTHERN LOVE—Andrea Leeds finds comfort in the arms of Don Ameche in "Swanee River," which is to have 7 and 10 o'clock previews tomorrow night at the Keith Memorial.

Eve Arden Tops Smart Gayety Bill

Dancer Eve Arden, in a league-of-nations repertoire and "Lulu," starring in a "How to Undress Before Your Husband" skit, are the Gayety Burlesque Theater's headliners for the week.

Steve Mills, Harry "Boob" Myers, "Tanglefoot" and Walter Brown help to balance the bill with their comedy.

Plenty of Comedy On Howard Stage

It was no foolin' about "Funs-a-Poppin" at the Old Howard this week. It is, and the laughs come fast and constantly. Major contributor to the hilarity is Tommy "Bozo" Snyder. Mary Lane, "blonde Venus of burlesque" and are all that a t.m.m. could demand in the way of scenrey.

THE TARIFF GROUP of the American Federation of Labor, known as America's Wage Earners' Protective Tariff Conference, in a message to Representatives and Senators has demanded scrapping the existing Hull foreign trade pacts, full protection for American labor, and refusal to extend to the State Department the so-called reciprocal tariff authority after it expires in June.

Representatives of organized labor thus join with organized industry and organized agriculture to prevent further erosion of American living standards by the Free Traders at Washington.

And it is primarily labor's fight.

For the bulk—some 85 per cent—of the national income, which is derived primarily from protected industry and protected agriculture, goes to workers and others in gainful occupations.

Accordingly it is the American workers primarily who are victimized by Hull's policy of exposing the home market to the infiltration of industrial goods and agricultural products from sweatshop nations overseas which maintain coolie standards.

The rank and file in organized labor in the United States have come to see that their age-long struggle for still higher wage and living standards in the United States will be defeated by the introduction of cheap goods from foreign nations embracing coolie standards of remunerating workers.

ORGANIZED LABOR has grasped the basic inconsistency of the New Deal, which, with its left hand introduced at home cost-raising social legislation for higher wages and shorter hours, and with its right hand tore down the tariff barriers which protected American employers from competition from nations with inferior standards.

Getting down to brass tacks, the labor group wisely advocated excise taxes on all foreign-produced competitive products sufficient to make the delivered cost in this country equal to the cost of similar domestic products.

This would merely take away from foreigners the artificial premium granted by the Hull program for exploitation of workers in substandard alien lands.

The Federation group went a step further, and advocated fair treatment to American employers who comply with new legislative requirements for still shorter work weeks and still higher wage rates than prevailed before the New Deal.

It sensibly proposed extension to foreign-produced competitive commodities of precisely the same fair labor standards required of home producers and denial of entry in interstate commerce of goods produced under substandard conditions.

Such a change would end the ridiculous Administration policy of harassing American producers while coddling foreigners.

Despite all its fine phrases, the Hull scheme, which has resulted in slashing some 1100 tariff rates, will dilute American economic superiority with prevailng international poverty.

THE HARBOR TRAGEDY, the drowning of three boys playing on ice cakes off Carson Beach and the near-drowning of six others, suggests an important question which thousands will ask.

IS ECONOMY WORTH WHILE WHEN ITS REWARD IS DEATH? That is the question.

One cannot dismiss this sorrowful accident by attributing it to youthful folly or by saying it was foolhardy for children to defy running tides and bitter breezes on makeshift rafts.

That situation has been going on for years. In all probability persons who have shouted for economy for economy's sake did the same thing when they were boys.

Better by far would be a common sense realization of the fact that short-sighted municipal budget pruning eliminated Police Department Station Twelve and obliged Station Six to assume the entire responsibility for one of Boston's most populous and hazardous areas.

As a result, children, given a holiday by the suspension of school sessions, courted death unwatched and unmolested, and patrolmen did not reach the scene until AFTER A CALL HAD BEEN SENT TO THEM.

It might be said that those charged with the patrolling of this coastal section were negligent in failing to anticipate what boys would do.

It might be said that officers in prowl cars or on foot should have seen the youths' peril in time to save them, particularly in view of the record which shows that on duty Monday at Station Six were seventy men—two sergeants and 18 patrolmen on foot patrols, eight patrolmen in four automobiles, 11 patrolmen on special duty, three on inside work, and two sergeants and 26 patrolmen on other assignments.

But regrets and accusations will hardly put the breath of life into bodies that contain no life.

All we can do and all we certainly should do is belatedly to open our eyes to the undeniable truth that one police station with fewer men has failed to do the work of two adequately staffed stations and has thus jeopardized the lives and safety of those who live in the area and who have every right in the world to expect proper protection for themselves and their children.

True Wisdom

WHAT with these goggly, grown-up eyes . . . you'll say, I guess, I'm pretty wise . . . To tell the truth, it's mostly show . . . There's lots of things I'd like to know . . . Why do balloons go up—not down? . . . And what makes kittens purr? . . . And why don't fishes ever drown? . . . And why don't bugs have fur? . . . And why does candy taste so sweet . . . while soap is not so good to eat? . . .

Inquiring little minds recall . . . to us that only fools know all . . . As we in years and wisdom grow . . . we sense how little wise men know.

MOST VEHEMENT and virulent denunciation of the haywire economics of the California lotus-land which we have heard came from an old gentleman who is well into his eighth decade. The most spirited defense of what may be loosely called the EPIC plan, with various ham-and-egg trimmings, came from a comparative youngster of our acquaintance.

This apparent desertion of their respective age groups suggested that possibly the sociologists who are worrying about the growing preponderance of old people in our population are making some loose assumptions about the erratic thinking and behaviour of old people.

In the long run, politicians who depend on American group opinion have been disappointed. Political blocs usually don't pan out in the election shake-down.

It appears to this onlooker that after a man is dry behind the ears he usually follows his main intellectual or political drift on into old age. If he is a young sap, he will be an old one, if the fool-catcher doesn't get him; and if he has served Minerva, she probably won't desert him in his old age.

DR. RAYMOND PEARL, Dr. William Ogburn, of the University of Chicago, and other sociologists and geneticists see each lusty worker packing an old man of the sea on his back in the years to come.

DR. RAYMOND PEARL

Prime reasons for this gloomy outlook are the falling birth rate and the increasing carry-over of the aged and non-productive population, as science extends the life span. On this, the finding of the actuaries may well be heeded, but when we find one impractical visionary we also find a Charles Evans Hughes or a Henry Ford.

There is to be observed here one of those reversals of form as curious as the Republicans becoming the champions of State's rights and the Democrats of increasing federalization.

Back in the brave young days of Tom Johnson, Brand Whitlock, Newton Baker and others of that bold phalanx of American reform, elderly people were those who buttressed a sterile conservatism with their hatred of change; who chained the wheels of progress and barred youth from its kingdom.

Now the oldsters are the wild and irresponsible innovators, mining and sapping at the foundations of the republic, fostering weird economic schemes, swayed by every wind of crackpot doctrine. It is now hard-working, conservative youth which is the goal keeper of free enterprise and sound conservatism.

DR. PEARL and his colleagues seem to confirm this tendency toward recreance to early conditioning. We can't agree. We believe that diligent research among the aged millenialists of California and waypoints would show that they were always more or less that way.

A more pertinent inquiry, as we see it, would cover the question of whether dim-wits live longer than more sagacious citizens. If they do, there might be a pilling up of skittery and unmanageable political doctrine.

But, unless the scientists so find and report, let's hope it will all come out in the wash.

-:- -:- MY DAY -:-

HYDE PARK, Jan. 16—In New York City on Friday it rained most of the day and, when we reached Hyde Park, we were told it had been raining or snowing all day.

Saturday was filled with all the air and exercise we could get. A long walk in the morning, a ride in the afternoon, and then we got out a little cutter. Though the snow was not the kind that makes good sleighing, we did manage by choosing our roads carefully, to drive through the woods and even over to the big house to have a look at the library. Many of the partitions are up now.

Two quiet evenings and late breakfasts seem great luxury. The sky continues to look as though either snow or rain might fall upon us at any moment. I like particularly the feeling of isolation that winter gives one and I think I shall enjoy being snowed in sometime in the future. Just now, I couldn't indulge in a changed schedule, when there is an engagement, made months beforehand, always ahead.

I SEE by the newspapers that the New York World's Fair has formally invited the quintuplets to set up their nursery in the grounds on the Fair next summer.

I suppose they will be allowed an occasional peek at the Fair, but judging from the past their nurses and guardians will see that the little ones lead normal lives.

One-way glass will undoubtedly make it possible for thousands of visitors to the Fair to look in on these five attractive youngsters who have been so carefully brought up. One may see them at work and at play without being seen by them.

I hope that Canada will let them come, for I think the whole United States will feel pleasure in being their hosts.

In this day of hatreds and wars and rumors of wars, it is good to cement friendships between nations through the affection we all feel for children. The quintuplets have drawn innumerable visitors from the United States to Canada and all of them have been captivated by the charm these children seem to radiate.

I feel that it is a very happy gesture to have them come as guests of the Fair of the United States. Many people who might never have had a glimpse of them in Canada will be able to see them here.

It has always seemed to me that their care, the simplicity and regularity with which their lives are planned, must serve as an object lesson to many families both rich and poor. Good luck to you, little quintuplets if you come to us as our guests, may your visit be a happy time.

ROGER WILLIAM RIIS of 122 Fifth ave. summoned the fire department to extinguish a fire at his home Saturday. Later he wrote a letter to Fire Commissioner McElligott, commending his men for their work and explaining that their job had been done so thoroughly that Riis' half-completed puzzle had been left undisturbed . . . The commissioner's office replied, apologetically: "Perhaps if the firemen had been at your house a little bit longer they might have completed the puzzle."

Berle now is ailing and must leave for a Florida vacation. And so until his return Berle's role will be assumed by Phil Silvers.

SALLY BENSON sent acknowledgments for the gifts she received on a mimeographed form which requires only a pencil line drawn through all the items mentioned, except the one received. It reads. "Dearest ——. Thank you ever so much for the gorgeous: Orchids, $ . . . checks, jewels, furniture, bric-a-brac, radio, perfume, auto, under-garments, 5 (10)-pound box of candy, book(s)——and accessories. It was the very nicest gift I've received to date. Cordially."

HE MADE GOOD in a large way, and skillfully operated The Mayfair, Boston's famous nightclub, so that the profits for the fiscal year 1938-'39 were indicative that a miniature gold-mine had been struck in the Bibulous Belt of Boston . . . The place was bought from Benny Gaines et al on a part down, part later-on basis . . . The part later-on was more than the part down . . . Some say it was $20,000 and twice the amount of the initial payment . . . Others agreed that the price was $30,000—but that half was laid on the line at the time of purchase . . . Whatever it was, all the notes were paid from profits in the first year of operation . . . And, as a natural reward for his success, the ringsiders in the know cheered Alex Finn, who is very popular, and Walter Finn, his son, who is very, very popular, and one and all were pleased.

IN THE ADVENTUROUS life of Mr. Finn, so his friends believed, there was one solid prop tying him to Boston and its nocturnal scene, and from its operation Alex and his son would be able to extract a living . . . The Mayfair . . . So what happened? . . . Last night, while the elder Finn was ailing at his home in Brookline, and while Son Walter was keeping post at his usual place by the reservation desk, in walked a young man who introduced himself as the new owner . . . Incredible? 'S a fact . . . The new young owner is Michael Redstone of Allston . . . He has had experience in the nightclub business, and at one time had three establishments under his wing . . . None was as pretentious as The Mayfair, but they were going concerns and probably profitable . . . Now all this is not intended as a slap at Mr. Redstone . . . He takes his place in the scheme of things with the support of to this column —valuable recommendations

AND HE'S THE NEW OWNER—sho' enuf . . . He had the papers and everything' . . . How could it happen? . . . Finn the Elder has had a backer in his ventures here and in New York, a gentleman from the south-east section of the Cape . . . The partner had the authority, as well as the right no doubt, to sell the widely-known spot so ably "fronted" by the Finns . . . The only reason for telling the story in such detail is to "cite a moral" . . . I don't think that we ever "cited a moral" in this space before . . . It's an old moral, at that.

HERE WAS ALEX GOING along at a merry pace in the Mayfair, and satisfied that here was one stanchion which Fate or anything else would find it difficult to kick out from under him . . . The New York attempt —the behemoth of an International Casino—had failed . . . But he had the Mayfair . . . And lately things have been bad for Mr. Finn, except in the vicinity of Boston's Broadway where the Mayfair stands . . . Yes, sir. The good ol' Mayfair was a success, come what may from other directions . . . That was until last night . . . And now it's gone . . . The moral? . . . If at first you don't succeed, try, try again . . . But what about a guy who succeeds and still has to try again?

MARGARET SULLAVAN IN M-G-M EPIC

By Louella O. Parsons

Margaret Sullavan

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 16—I was just pulling the cover off my typewriter when word came that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will put Phyllis Bottome's "The Immortal Storm" in immediate production. Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Frank Morgan and Robert Young are the players. You'll see Margaret, of course, as the daughter, Frank Morgan as the father and Jimmie and Bob as the two step-sons.

Frank Borzage and Sidney Franklin, the producer, will not make any compromise with Miss Bottome's novel. They will unfold the story just as it's been written. After all there is nothing particularly revolutionary about the Nazi angle. It merely tells the story of family life and of what the Hitler regime did to upset a normal German family. Personally, I felt that "The Immortal Storm" was the very best book written on Nazism for it seemed to be told with more truth and less bitterness.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: Alice Faye lost 12 pounds in New York. The irony of fate is that now she has to gain it back to play "Lillian Russell" after trying her best for years to reduce; Hedy Lamarr, Gene Markey, Joan Bennett and her bridegroom, Walter Wanger, conversing pleasantly at the Bette Davis tea. David Selznick had his hand severely bitten by a dog and had to have three stitches taken; Arleen Whelan dining with Alex D'Arcy on her first night home. Seated with them were Susan Hayward and Howard Hughes—a happy foursome; Paulette Goddard now has 42 film socialite members of her ski club, which starts operations shortly; Anita Loos and Melchior Lengle have a comedy idea for which Gilbert Miller has spoken. Anita cannot really write the play until her contract with M-G-M expires in March.

Norma, by the way, is back from Florida in her Beverly house; saw George Jessel in New York and his hair has turned white.

TWO-MINUTE STORY

BEING a tall girl, I developed a secret complex in my early teens. My date MUST be six feet tall or more, I thought, and I often raised my voice to say it. Friends laughed at first, but Jean, my chum, believed it from the first.

The day I met Ken I saw vaguely that he was good-looking—and not very tall. But I was surprised and pleased when he asked me to have dinner with him before he left town that night.

Then, after we had spent less than two hours together, he proposed to me. Too shocked at first to hear him, I laughed at the seriousness and dismissed it as "a line."

I DIDN'T EXPECT to see or hear from him again, but his letters coming in rapid succession every day afterward, left me wondering if that evening would be forgotten as soon as I had thought it would. I didn't understand his regular telegrams, flowers and candy, but I was flattered by all his attention.

We read those letters aloud and discussed them, Jean and I. We laughed at his sentimental phrases and talked about my "mysterious short-fellow."

He came back several week-ends, and I knew my affection for him was growing. In fact, by the time he met Jean, I was deeply in love with him.

They met as he was leaving for the station, and I left them talking while I returned to my room for my coat. When I went back to the reception room, I stopped to greet another couple who had just come in. Glancing first at them I saw Jean admiring a ring—one I had not seen. She looked up at him and laughed. They had not seen me, but I heard her sarcastic words: "But surely this isn't for Frances . . . I don't think she will take it . . . She thinks of you only as a good friend . . . She told me so."

JEAN turned to me and smiled when I reached them. "You like TALL men, don't you, Frances?"

I still remember the tremble in my lips when I tried to speak, and the searching look in his eyes. "Yes, I always have."

He took his hat to leave, and mumbled: "I'm—sorry. I guess I've been wasting your time. Good-by, Frances." And the disgust and hurt in his eyes told me it really was good-by.

I was sorry then for the remarks Jean and I had tossed between us—and my silly complex, because both added up to a bitter ending to the real thing. Since then, I've wasted a lot of my own time, but not by mentioning my old complex!

Can you write a short story? Send it to Two-Minute Story Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston. Five dollars will be paid for week's best story.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

THAT SCRAMBLE Christmas Morning! You know how it goes. Everyone opening bundles . . . reading messages . . . laughing, crying, calling across the room. Everyone gay and excited!

Until, presently, something slight but heavy lay in my own hands. Oddly heavy. A joke, perhaps? I wondered. Then I broke the seals and found — an angel! A slender, iron angel with a halo 'round her face and slim hands raised in welcome.

An iron angel for my door. I'd never had a gift like this before . . . A lovely thing for any lonely door—or lonely heart!

"FROM TARBIE," said the card. Dear Tarbie, whose bright friendship has become as much a part of Christmas as the twinkling wreaths and stars.

"It's so like Tarbie!" said I to myself. "As though she sent her own bright spirit to our door!" And then a deeper understanding came. "Like Tarbie, yes. But more—much more than that. Like Love—all Love that comes a-knocking at all doors, on Christmas Day or any other time. Like Love—that's plain as iron, and as strong, made up of simple, kindly words and deeds . . . yet blessed with such bright magic that its touch can heal and open [illegible] door."

And I went on thinking about Love and what a wonderful thing it is. So plain and yet so potent. More powerful than any of the great things for which we rack our lives. There's Money, for instance. And Success . . . and Fame. Yet none of these can quicken broken hearts or wake our first young faith and fire again. They knock and knock upon our stout, sealed doors but nothing stirs. Their knocking is in vain.

And I thought of all the weary hearts I'd known who were needing Love's knock. Hurt and hopeless ones, bitter and bewildered, angry and terrified . . . waiting, every one of them, for release from pain.

What could make them? What could free them? What could make them whole again?

ONLY LOVE! LOVE ALONE COULD WAKE THEM . . . FREE THEM . . . MAKE THEM WHOLE!

LOVE—there's the answer to our fear and pain.

You don't have to be powerful to love. Nor clever. Nor rich nor wise. You need only be KIND.

KINDNESS—THAT'S THE KEY TO EVERY DOOR! LOVE'S THE ANGEL THAT UNLOCKS EACH HEART.

Other Bostonians in the throng of racing fans at Hialeah were Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lamus and Miss Betty Foster of Brookline.

Dorchester Dance Friday

An elimination prize waltz will be one of the interesting features planned by the committee in charge of the mid-winter dancing party to be held Friday evening in St. Paul's Parish Hall, Woodward Park st., Dorchester, under the direction of the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

Judging the contest will be a group of attractive girls including Genevieve Slattery, Phyllis Dooley, Barbara O'Hagan and Arlene Brady.

Officers of the Society are Thomas Morrissey, president; Daniel Sullivan, vice-president; Alexander Meffan, treasurer; Robert Rice, secretary. They are in charge of the gala party, assisted by members of the organization.

GOVERNOR TO ADDRESS BROOKLINE WOMEN

Gov. Leverett Saltonstall will be the speaker at Legislative Day of the Brookline Woman's Club next Monday in Whitney Hall. Mrs. Francis A. Niccoles, chairman of the afternoon meeting, has also arranged a musical program. Mrs. Carl M. Goodspeed will be hostess during the tea hour.

Ace of Clubs

Plans Supper Dance Feb. 2

Ace of Clubs members assembled at the Somerset's Princess Ballroom yesterday for the purpose of hearing a popular Boston newspaperman present an absorbing little talk on outstanding women of the theater.

For extra good measure, Mrs. Norbert Reilly . . . former president of the Guild of the Infant Saviour . . . gave a most interesting three-minute talk on the work of the Community Federation which is doing such splendid work for under privileged children around and about at the various agencies which will share in the great 1940 Community Fund Campaign for $4,625,000.00 . . . slated to begin Jan. 22.

Mrs. Henry Fitzpatrick of Belmont, president of the Ace of Clubs, introduced both speakers. She was smartly outfitted in gray wool frock and becoming brown hat.

In the meantime plans roll merrily along for the club's annual mid-winter supper dance . . . slated for Friday evening, Feb. 2, at the Somerset . . . with Mrs. John Gahan of Medford, chairman of the gala affair.

You Can Be Beautiful

Creamy Emulsion for Skin

By ARLINE GOULD

DON'T LET this falsely spring-like weather fool you (it may fool us too, and by the time this gets in print the temperature will probably have tumbled back to zero) into thinking your skin will get along very well without too much coddling. The sudden, extreme changes are as bad for it as a steady, blowing cold.

If you haven't already gone about the serious business of using a fine protective lotion faithfully, you'll be interested in the latest to bounce onto the market in a fine, special price reduction.

This is one of our favorites. It's pink and bland as a baby's rattle, wonderfully fragrant, and made by a house which is famed for its preparations that tend dry skins.

You may have twice the usual size, actually 12 ounces, for $1. Regularly it sells at $1 for six ounces. So you see the double-value difference.

It helps guard your skin, makes a smooth-as-silk make-up base, and is a heavenly body rub. Soft and velvet-smooth, but not sticky, this creamy emulsion feels so soothing on your skin.

Applied before going out into the cold it helps protect your skin from chapping and rough redness.

After the bath, use it with special emphasis on rough elbows, hands, ankles and knees. The flat, flask-like bottle packs easily, and yields a good grip for your bath-moist hands.

If you would like to learn all about this half-price special on a famous lotion, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days until five-thirty, or write, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Marion Atherton To Wed Feb. 3

Marion Atherton, well known among Boston's younger equestriennes, will become the Valentine of George Kemble Goodhue, Jr., on Saturday, Feb. 3, at a small home wedding at The Ledges, Swampscott, residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Atherton.

Attending her as bridesmaids at the 3 o'clock ceremony will be her cousin, Natalie Sibley, Virginia Knapp of Cohasset, and her little niece, Judith Ann Atherton, who will be flower girl.

The bride-to-be graduated from the Brimmer School, the Modern School of Applied Art and Academie Moderne. Her fiance, son of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Goodhue of Salem, is in the banking business in Salem. He is a member of the Appalachian Mountain Club.

Entertain On Cruiser

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sanborn of Boston have arrived at Hollywood Beach, Fla., aboard their cruiser, Parrot, and are entertaining daily with cruises and fishing trips to nearby resorts.

Guests aboard the Parrot for a cruise up the inland waterway and New River Saturday included Mr. and Mrs. John M. Fraser of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Peter M. Fraser and R. W. Simpkin of Hartford. The all-day jaunt ended with a formal dinner and dance in the Hollywood Beach Hotel. Earlier in the week Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn were hosts at a cocktail party in honor of Mrs. George Bovaird and Miss Marion Kennedy of Bradford, Pa.

Society Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Mathew P. Whital of Worcester have arrived at Belleair, Florida, to spend the rest of the winter season.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Kimpton of Beason street are spending a few days in New York where they are guests at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Love

And Marriage

O.K. If You're Not Kidding

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"Am I just kidding myself along, a foolish day-dreamer, when every action, almost every thought is directed toward a certain goal?

"I want to marry the only girl. She's just too wonderful to describe. I want to practice law. I've worked like the very d—— at night school and am almost ready to pass my bar exams. A house and an old-fashioned family of four or five kids is what I'd like to have to make me completely happy.

"To accomplish these things, I've been a janitor in an apartment house tending furnace and rustling ashes, I've worked in a chain grocery store, been a window washer—what have I not done since I graduated from high school with honors! When I'm blue perhaps I feel I'm kidding myself along. My girl and I have been engaged for three years.

"NEARLY ALWAYS HOPEFUL"

Whether a person is just kidding himself along or planning constructively when he indulges in day-dreams depends upon the type of person he is. Kidding one's self or day-dreaming may be a blessing or a curse. It may be just so much dope that fills one with dreams of wish fulfillment and keeps one from facing stern realities. Or it may be a leg up the ladder.

If you belong to the school of wishful thinkers and have the grim determination to hold the thought, you'll have plenty of great names to bolster up your argument. If you're just dreaming with no resolution or drive behind it, you might see an unflattering reflection of yourself in the next bum you happen to meet.

AWAY with toil and stormy weather . . . even if it's only a three-day sojourn in the sunny South, it's something you should get the best of, every waking, lounging, playing moment . . . so we've picked out two that can take care of the play days and the laze-and-sleep siestas. One is a new georgette wool that's so exceptionally well styled it comes in not only misses' but women's sizes—14-20 and 38-42. Stunning in the new palest beige shade called "Pale Dry." And also in grey, which is a real high fashion color. This, by the way, is an exclusive creation with the shop where we found it. Made to the buyer's order, so you won't find it elsewhere. Also comes in very pretty dusty pastels. We think the heart-pockets are quite something. $16.95.

A cool navy or black seersucker robe, good for dinners on your own sea-deck or verandah that looks over some exotic plaza, is the new one illustrated. A gorgeous printed front is very slenderizing. All sizes, $5.95.

Good Manners

Her Reply to Escort's Toast

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN,

1—When a lady is in the company of a gentleman, and he proposes a toast, say, to the "most beautiful girl in the world," how should she accept this toast? Should she thank him for it and drink with him or should she wait until he first takes a drink from his glass?

2—If the lady orders Scotch and soda, and it is brought to her in two separate glasses, should she, her escort, or the waiter pour the contents of the small glass into the glass containing the soda?

D.

1—The most gracious and the most sensible way for a woman to receive a compliment or to reply to a toast that is a complimentary comment, is for her to take the pleasant comment with the natural give-and-take spirit of today's world. That is, she should receive the compliment graciously, with a friendly smile, and a "Thank you" or "How very kind of you."

I hasten to add, however, that this is advice for the usual compliment. If the ardent beau proposes a toast to "The most beautiful girl in the world," her reply to this world-beating enthusiasm would test the wisdom of Helen of Troy! If the young lady can be casual about this compliment, she has my compliments.

Since there isn't very much to say in answer to this perhaps overcharged compliment, she might say just that . . . "You leave me speechless, sir!" And she shouldn't drink the toast with the gallant gentleman!

2—Customarily the waiter inquires if the person wishes to have him pour the drink. If he doesn't do this, the escort may ask, or the woman may pour her own.

Eggs Tops in One-Dish Meals

By MARTHA LEE

The month of January is the time for resolutions and chances to brush up on recipes for one-dish meals and meatless menus which enable you to get out of the kitchen and have time for other interests.

If you try out your resolutions and they work for thirty days, the habit will become second nature, like breakfast—which points out the way for the first resolution, to use more eggs.

No other single food has the possibilities of eggs, and aside from fish oils, egg yolks probably constitute the richest source of vitamin D in the ordinary dietary, a timely bit of information, for winter diets can so easily find themselves lacking in this essential bit of sunshine.

The secret of success in cooking eggs and dishes in which eggs predominate is to cook slowly at moderate, even temperature. The delicacy of flavor in a boiled or poached egg whether soft or hard-cooked depends entirely on the low temperature.

Poached eggs are particularly good served with various combinations of vegetables and make a grand one-dish meal

POACHED EGGS

Use frying pan or shallow pan Add 1 tablespoon salt or 1 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon vinegar to each quart of water, and bring to a boil. Drop eggs in carefully by breaking each into small dish, then slipping quickly into boiling water; cover, reduce heat and let stand 3 to 5 minutes, or until white is set and a white film covers the yolk, and the egg is cooked to the desired firmness. Remove eggs with skimmer.

SPINACH RING WITH POACHED EGG

3 cups cooked spinach, chopped
Salt, pepper, butter
Cooked lima beans, buttered
American cheese, grated
Poached eggs
Toast rounds
1 cup salad dressing
2 tbsp. lemon juice

Thoroughly drain hot chopped spinach, season it well with salt, pepper and melted butter, and pack it firmly into a buttered 6-inch ring mold. Unmold it on a round choc plate, and fill the center with hot buttered lima beans. Cover the spinach ring with grated American cheese

Surround with poached eggs on toast rounds, and serve with a dressing made by heating the salad dressing over hot water. Let stand 10 minutes without boiling. Add lemon juice and mix well.

The success of this meal depends on the cooking of the eggs. Drop them gently into salted boiling water. As the egg is immersed, the water will immediately cease to boil, and it should be kept below the boiling point throughout the entire cooking process. Do not try to drop the eggs from the shell as the eggs will not keep their shape. Baste the eggs with spoonfuls of the hot water if it is desired that the yolks be firm.

CURRIED EGGS

4 tbsp. butter
1 tbsp. chopped onion
1 to 2 tbsp. curry powder
3 tbsp. flour
2 cups milk
Salt, pepper
4 to 6 hard-cooked eggs

Cook onion for a few minutes in butter add curry powder, stir in the flour, and blend thoroughly Then add milk gradually, and cook until thickened. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Slice eggs or cut them in eighths lengthwise, and reheat in the sauce. Serve with flaky boiled rice

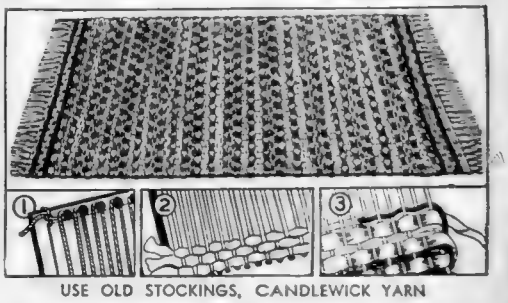
To hard cook eggs, let them stand in water over low heat for 15 to 25 minutes. Then place at once in cold water. When cooked by this method and cooled immediately, the dark greenish color which sometimes appears on the yolk's surface will not form

MOLDED CHOPPED EGGS

4 hard cooked eggs, chopped
Salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ cup butter, melted

Combine chopped eggs with salt to taste, pepper and butter, put in well-greased individual molds and press firmly. Cover with waxed paper and chill. This makes a pleasing garnish for many salads. Makes 4 small molds.

Easy to Weave Colorful Rug



USE OLD STOCKINGS, CANDLEWICK YARN

You weave this rug easily from old tan stockings, candlewick yarn in kaf green, cherry red and black. You need 35 yards of the green, 30 yards of red, 35 yards of black.

Your "loom" is just four strips of wood fastened together to make a frame 26 by 20 inches.

For the warp, insert 37 thumb tacks close together along each 20-inch side, beginning 2½ inches from each end. Tie green candlewick yarn to upper left corner, as in Figure 1. Then loop yarn around each tack, going back and forth across the face of the loom.

Next weave in 2¾ inches of filler at each end, as in Figure 2. The filler—which may be strips of old cloth or cardboard—gives a firm edge. On being removed at the end of your weaving, it leaves warp for fringe.

To make each border, weave 2 rows of green candlewick, 2 black, 2 red, 2 green, 3 black. Use a No. 14 tapestry needle.

For the center, as in Figure 3 you alternate 2 rows of candlewick with one row of stripe cut spirally from stockings. Weave stripe with fingers.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, Beautiful and Useful Articles You Can Easily Weave, to Boston Evening American Home Institute, 109 West 39th st., New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

IF IT WASN'T FOR WOMEN

A Complete Short Story Daily on This Page

By ISOLA FORRESTER

THERE are criminals, and then again criminals. Those who make a business out of crime, and those who adopt the profession with a challenge at life through some lack in themselves. They can't take it themselves, so they take it from others. Tony Corraro was in this class.

The Cast of Characters In "If It Wasn't for Women——"

TONY, who disappears frequently, but always returns with pockets filled with money.

ENRICO, who loves and is loved by Elena, Tony's sister.

At 22, Tony had been places ever since he had run away from school at 13. Being lucky and likable, he had found easy ways of making money, and he gave no explanation where it came from. It was enough that every so often he blew into town and surprised the family with presents, a fur coat for his mother, setting the old man up in a little cigar store over on Broadway, handing out cash to his two kid brothers to take their girls to a show, and most of all, making some of his sister's dreams come true. Of them all, he loved Elena the best. They were alike in their flair for life, their love of the white hyacinths, their craving for contact with people and interesting things. Only Elena took hers out in her music and laughter and friendliness, and Tony found his outlet in outlaw adventure.

He could always spin a good story about what he was doing. Working the race tracks from Tampa to the Coast. He was always on his way somewhere. They listened to him admiringly up in the six-room apartment on Riverside. Tony paid half the rent here. He had insisted on the kids and Elena having swell environment. He couldn't realize how Elena and her mother loved the old Sicilian neighborhood, the wonderful old church in the gardens at the corner of Mulberry, where the mothers and little sisters brought the babies to play in the sunshine.

ITALY'S CODE

Tony dropped in on them several times a year. Then came a long wait with no word at all from him. Months had passed, then it was a year, with no word even at Christmas, and Elena and her mother went way down town to the old brown church to light candles and say prayers for Tony because anything might have happened to him, and they not heard of it.

They had to give up the apartment on Riverside, and it was the most natural thing in the world to move back to Prince st. There were new apartment buildings in the old districts now, and Mamma Costanza could go often to the old church to ask heaven and all the saints about her boy. Elena only took one music lesson a week now. Joe, at 14, had to take Tony's place after their father died, and little Dino helped him sell papers.

They lived on the fourth floor over stores, four apartments to a floor, and there was a small lobby and an elevator. It was a long way from the old walk-up railroad flat they used to live in. Costanza took in piece-work tailoring, and Elena had a good position in the suits and coats department of a big store uptown. It wasn't so bad, pulling altogether for the good of the family. That was what their father had taught them was the code in Italy in his day, first of all Il Deo, then Il Patria, and finally, Il Famillia — God, Country and Family, they compassed human beings with peace and love. Only Tony passed all this up as too sentimental for a wise guy. He had to go places, only the trouble was, this time the place had found him and held him fast.

Elena noticed Enrico in the elevator one morning as she started for work. He got on at her floor and looked at her with his sleepy eyes in a way that thrilled her uneasily. He had thick, curly hair and about him was the relaxed power of an athlete. He showed his admiration of her, but not impudently. And when she would come home at night, she would find him hanging around the front of the building or in the lobby, waiting for the sight of her. It set all her days to dancing, the great expectancy of finding him there.

Dino and Joe got acquainted with him first and told her his name. They teased her about him because he asked them to introduce him to her. One night he was not downstairs when she got home, but when she let herself in the door, she heard his laugh in the front room. He was talking to her mother and the boys. Elena fled to their own room, the first one off the hall, to wait there until she could face him. She knew why he was there. It was no secret. His eyes had told her from the very first day.

After a week or so Enrico was taking her out to movies and concerts and for long walks. "I'll bet he means business, 'Lena," said Dino. "He got struck on you the first time he looked at you."

And Mamma Costanza smiled knowingly, with raised eyebrows, and Elena had flushed and told Dino he was crazy. But they all knew why Enrico came to see them. They were just waiting for him to tell them about himself. Then they would celebrate the betrothal.

Sunday afternoon Joe was home, reading a detective magazine. He waited until his mother had gone out to kneel in the old church, praying for Tony. Then he showed the write-up in the magazine about him. There were his pictures confronting him unmistakably—front view, side view—out of the rogues' gallery. Only they didn't look like Tony, devil-may-care and debonair. They were haggard and unshaven and desperate looking. Elena read with parted lips and staring eyes. Tony had been a bank robber, part of a gang. He had been used as a lookout because of his youth and good looks. Two of the robbers had been killed fifteen months ago in a bank hold-up in Chicago. Tony had been captured, convicted, getting perhaps a heavier sentence because he had to carry the full responsibility with his pals dead.

ELENA'S SECRET

He had got a sentence of twenty-five years. With his youth and good behavior, he might shorten it to fifteen, perhaps, but Tony had not waited. He had taken his own chance and escaped. He was "wanted" by the police. Even the magazine offered a reward of a hundred dollars to any one recognizing him and turning him in. Elena warned Joe not to tell any one about the article.

She could not bring herself to tell Enrico the truth. The hazard of losing him terrified her more than her concern over Tony. How would he act when she told him her brother was an escaped convict? It haunted her day and night, that question, and the dread of Tony showing up, tracing them to their new home, as he surely would, she knew. Every time Enrico kissed her good night, she clung to him as if it were the last embrace they might ever have. He had not asked her to marry him yet, but she knew he would.

He would always step inside the hall door to kiss her good night; facing them was the door of her own room, with a mirror opposite. And on this last night, even while he held her in his arms, he caught a glimpse of someone in the mirror, standing behind the half-opened door.

Thrusting Elena behind him, he flashed a revolver with the command, "Come out of there, Corraro!"

"Oh, be quiet—my mother does not know"—Elena tried to grasp the wrist that balanced the gun. "Tony, for the love of God, be careful!"—Enrico shook off her hold and stepped into the darkness of the bedroom. She could hear them struggling, breathing heavily, Tony gasping, cursing, and then a body falling.

"Turn on the light here, Elena," ordered Enrico quietly. She obeyed him, as Tony tried to struggle up from the floor. His hands were caught in the steel trap of handcuffs.

"You double-crossing rat, you," he said between his clenched teeth. "Coming around here spying on my mother and sister, kidding her into thinking you cared for her—Dino told me——"

"Shut your mouth," Enrico told him. "Elena's out of this. It's your own game, not hers."

"Oh, yeh?" sneered Tony. "Listen, Elena, this guy is Henry Petroni. He's been hunting me ever since I got away. He's a wise guy. He knew I'd come back home, and he took you on so he could get in here——"

"That's a lie," Enrico said steadily. "I could have killed you, couldn't I, when you pulled a gun on me? You're alive because I love your sister. I did come here to wait for you, but it's on the level now. She's going to marry me, Tony."

"FOR MOTHER'S SAKE"

Elena threw herself on his breast, pleading. "Let him go, please, please, for our mother's sake, let him go. He will be good now ——"

Tony scowled, listening to her. "It's O. K.," he said, slowly. "It's his job. If he's straight with you, I don't hold this against him. A man has to go through with his job, I know that. Can I say good-by to the kids?"

Enrico met his gaze with question and answer that was beyond speech. Then he unlocked the steel from his wrists. "See your mother, too, Tony. Don't be long. We're catching a plane for Chicago."

Elena was crying, her head pressed to her upflung arm against the door. He drew her gently into his embrace. "It's better this way, someone would have picked him up sooner or later. I can give him a good report, say he gave himself up without a fight. I'll do my best for the kid, Elena. You believe me, don't you?"

"If I didn't believe you, I should want to die myself tonight," she said. "If I believed that was the only reason why you came here ——"

"It was the only reason at first, why I came, but you're the reason I'm staying."

"Even now that you know about Tony——" she faltered.

"Foolish one, haven't I always known about him? And still I had to love you."

Presently Tony came towards them, pulling his cap lower over his eyes. Behind him they could see the two boys. They stood with their arms around Mamma Costanza. Her voice was low, but strong in courage and faith. She made the sign of the cross towards him. "The love of God go with you and help you, Tony."

Tony bowed his head at the blessing. His eyes were full of tears as he followed Enrico out, down the elevator, to the street.

"If it wasn't for women——" he started to say. Enrico took him by the arm.

"Don't worry. They're my family now. We'll have to hurry to make that plane."

THE END

"You double-crossing rat, you," he said between his clenched teeth.

Asks Mothers Pray, Work for U.S. Peace

Mothers of American sons of military age were urged to "work and pray so hard that the nation will never overlook or forget our pleas" in a letter of greeting sent today to the New England members of the National Legion of Mothers of America by a Brooklyn mother who told of the activities and enthusiasm of the mothers of Flatbush in the nation-wide drive to keep the United States out of Europe's war.

Mrs. George D. Frion, 1319 East 24th st., writes:

"Just a word of encouragement to the Boston mothers. The mothers of Flatbush, Brooklyn, are organizing. Many of us have signed up with the New York branch of the Legion of Mothers, but are forming active groups. We feel the mothers of America can prevent future wars.

"None should be more concerned and active than mothers. Let us work and pray so hard that our nation will never overlook or forget our pleas. Best wishes from the mothers of Brooklyn to the mothers of Boston and New England."

Mrs. George H. Thomas and Mrs. Thomas Eynon of Killingly, Ct.:

"Please add our names to your Legion of Mothers. We are signing pledge cards because we are opposed to our boys going across to aid a war that is none of our business.

Herbert J. Fogarty of 10 Hendry st., Dorchester, father of two young children, has dedicated a poem to the Legion of Mothers with his wishes of success. It is titled,

"TO THE MOTHERS OF AMERICA"

Ye mothers of men, who bore us in pain,
Rise up in your wrath with your might and your fame,
And announce to the world in tones loud and clear
Your message to men which they must hear:

"We raised not our sons to be killed or maimed,
To be offered about like pawns in a game;
Their lives are their own, not yours to command,
And why should they die in some foreign land?

If we are invaded by land or air
Our sons will bear arms and will do their share,
In a uniform they look fine, we know—
'Tis but a part of the glamour and show.
For what is war but the killing of men,
And when this we views, 'twill be never again!

The [illegible] that [illegible] and am
In a [illegible] of [illegible]
And no [illegible] [illegible] from me,
Or [illegible] [illegible]
Have [illegible] from the last great war.

This sorrow it brought to our own share?
Must families [illegible] be expected again,
Where [illegible] [illegible] children?
For [illegible] [illegible]
And pay [illegible] which she has [illegible]

Our nation shall stand as a bulwark for peace
And prayer that the reign of mankind shall cease
Here [illegible] [illegible]
In America, the Land of the Free!
"Oh, God of All Hosts raise up Thy hand
And drive from our country and every land
The scourge of war away forever
That men may live in peace together!
And hear the prayer from the hearts of mothers
Oh, spare our sons, and make all men as brothers."

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: The season's record for "curtain calls" was copped last night, they say, by Elmer Rice's "Two On An Island" . . . It Atty.-Gen. Paul A. Dever is interested, yesterday was Ethel Merman's birthday—as well as Paul's . . . Dick Pfennig, United Airline's eastern division operations manager, dined at the Statler with his friend, Henry Miller, the varnish and paint tycoon. As in all their occasional meetings, two subjects of conversation were taboo. Airplanes and paint . . . The Garbo-Dr. Hauser romance is volcanic, and when it erupts in the face of the gossips who say it won't, a reciprocal trade pact between them will be ended. The pact vouchsafed that both would shun publicity throughout their courtship, and would not talk to reporters or writers for the magazines.

THE WITS ARE showing Mischa Auer in a compromising pose by blanking out part of a scene in a picture magazine . . . We are glowing happily still because a consensus of the radio writers of the country placed this column's two favorite favorites at the head of their divisions. Bing Crosby and Guy Lombardo . . . Making it better, both lads rate among the few personal friends left this department from a wide acquaintanceship in the entertainment field which become more and more contracted as we—in America only remain banned from the theaters.

EXCLUSIVE — Has the score been evened for the late David J. Breen? . . . Did it happen nearly six months ago?

MICKEY ALPERT'S BAND is so good as a coast-to-const attraction that one, it woul dseem, has reason to be overjoyed with Mickey that the whole wide wists of the "big time" is suddenly his again . . . Billy Payne is splendid, too, and it may mean the long-awaited "break" for the popular Boston vocalist . . . You will excuse us please, if we keep our friends crossed, however . . . we are still shaking our head at what happened last night to Alet Finn . . . There's a lifelike copy of Andrea Leeds in town, and her name is Anneta Bennett. She worked at the Seville and will be one of Tommy Maren's helpers at The Commons. The new Maren spot will open the 22d inst.

SEA SAGA NEWS TIP WINS WOMAN PRIZE

When a Brant Rock woman learned last week that 13 fishermen had rowed 15 miles to shore after their vessel had been sunk in a storm she realized the dramatic news value of the story and immediately telephoned the city editor at Liberty 4000. As a reward for her alertness and prompt action in forwarding the news tip the editors of the Daily Record-Boston American-Sunday Advertiser awarded her $5.

A Roxbury man learned that four children had been overcome in a Winthrop st., Roxbury, fire and called the city editor at Liberty 4000, thereby assisting in exclusive pictures being obtained. He was paid $2, as was an Allston girl who telephoned a tip on the secret marriage of a retired banker to be nurse who had cared for his wife.

Similar amounts went to a Reading man who telephoned the tip on a Reading fire in which a 70-year-old man was seriously burned and two firemen were injured, and a South Boston man who sent a tip on a picture of a Waltham incubator baby.

Awards of $1 each were made to a Salem man who sent in a tip on a fire in which four persons were forced to leap into nets; a South Boston woman who furnished a tip on a fire in which a boy was slightly burned; and a Roxbury girl who told of a purse being snatched, with the thief later using keys found in it to enter and ransack the victim's house.

Similar amounts went to a Gloucester girl who told of a 24-ounce baby at a local hospital; a Dorcester man who gave a tip on a woman leaping from a window; a Roxbury girl who told of a girl being robbed of her pocketbook containing two weeks' pay; an Everett woman who telephoned a tip on a woman overcome by gas; and a Sanford, Me., man who telephoned the story of a $300,000 fire and arranged to send photos.

Awards of $1 were also made to a Natick man who sent a tip on a woman killed by an automobile; a Brockton girl who reported a young girl missing; a Cambridge girl who sent in a tip on a fire; and a West End man who told of a stolen taxi chased by police, with shots fired.

Probe Paradox Of Market Drop

Business activity trends continue to move contrary to stock prices . . . Gains in the former fail to find reflection in the markets and the "Sherlocks" of finance are hotly pursuing all clues . . .

PRINCIPAL . . . Result of sleuthing to date is confinded to proof recovery is the real thing . . . And since it can not be labelled false other leads must be followed . . . All deal with the future and are concerned with the things that might happen . . . To which the financial world characteristically, fatalistically, resigns itself . . . Much in the manner of a well man imagining himself sick . . . Things which made it possible for the business activity chart to register a recovery to 95.5 for the first week of 1940 are completely forgotten . . . The about-face in carloadings; the increase in cotton forwardings; the improvement in steel production . . . These are pushed oneside and the hunt degenerates into conjecture . . .

FOUR MENTAL . . . Stumbling blocks to better market action in line with actual trade conditions are discernable . . . 1) Doubt new orders will flow strongly enough to sustain industry during the second quarter . . . that's borrowing trouble and smacks of an alibi for those who said trade would slip in the first three months . . . 2) Fears of English liquidation . . . They have been with us since Sept. 1, 1939 . . . 3) Political uncertainty . . . it is an election year, new . . . it is an election year, new taxes are threatened and the debt limit is near . . . all are facts known for months . . . 4) Possible invasion of neutrals . . . an ever-present threat . . . but since the theater of war would grow belligerent trade should expand . . . Summed up all are explanations, not reasons for the slide in stock prices . . .

OBSERVATION . . . Of the 71st anniversary of the New England Shoe and Leather Association this month is accompanied by special emphasis on this section's place as the birthplace of the industry . Sec. Maxwell Field tells us the trade founded by two English shoemakers in 1630 has expanded until now N. E. produces some 150 million pairs of shoes annually . . . And throughout the years N. E. manufacturers have been leaders . Leaders in factory methods, new processes, and style promotion . . . And that leadership today means the employment of 75,000 shoe workers; 15,000 tannery workers; 10,000 workers in allied trades . . . Who account for 35 per cent of all the shoes produced in the U. S. . . .

IMMEDIATE . . . Stock market prospects are none too cheerful . . . Technical rallies of a sort seem inevitable . . . But signs of a long term base are lacking . . . For the cautious these will mean opportunities to lighten up . . . To get accounts in line with actualities . . . As for the underlying trend we do not think it changed . . . Rather is correction of an error in optimism taking place . . . On our part, at least, unwarranted optimism in the ability of prices to turn around after the drop from the September highs . . . It now appears a more generous correction was required . . . And a few more points on the downside should satisfy the most liberal, or stringent, ideas on the amount needed before a new upside start can be made . . .

WOOL TEXTILES GAINED IN '39

The National Association of Wool Manufacturers reported today that the production activity of woolen textile mills in 1939, as indicated by figures for the first eleven months of the year, was approximately 40 per cent greater than in 1938 and about five per cent less than in the post-war record year of 1935.

The association declared that 1939 production also was 15 per cent greater than in 1937 and between five and ten per cent higher than in 1936.

The figures, culled from the association's Monthly Statistics, disclosed that consumption of apparel wool during the first eleven months of 1939 averaged 5,640,000 scoured pounds weekly compared with an average of 3,956,000 pounds for the same period of 1938.

Stock Prices Improve in Slow Trading

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (AP)—Stock market leaders made another try at recovery today and the majority managed to tack on fractions.

It was far from a one-way trend, however, and minor declines were plentiful in dealings that were sluggish from the start.

European securities markets steadied. Bonds and commodities were a shade uneven.

Wall Street had little in the way of rallying news to go on, but the substantial four-day decline in stocks inspired short covering here and there and buying for a technical comeback.

Foreign war news apparently was unexciting for speculative forces. Offerings of American stocks and bonds from abroad remained a mere dribble, brokers said. Few surprises were found in the general run of business developments.

G.O.P. Makes Gold Big Issue of 1940

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

Special to Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—All indications in Washington today point to a historic battle between the Republicans and Democrats this year on the issue of sound money through a return to the gold standard.

Republican congressional leaders already are giving attention to the issue, now being raised by business and industry, for the immediate suspension of the gold-hoarding policy, as one of the principal aids that could be rendered at this time to recovery.

It appears likely that a strong gold plank will be written into the 1940 national Republican platform. If the issue can be forced in either Senate or House, or both, that platform plank will square with the party attitude in Congress.

The issue already bids fair to prove embarrassing to the administration, since a strong and determined sound money group in the Democratic party will endeavor to reaffirm previous party pledges with respect of the monetary system.

REPUDIATES PLEDGES

The extent to which the Democratic party has repudiated its pledge of 1932 on the money question probably exceeds similar repudiation in any other field.

The Democratic platform adoped at Chicago in 1932 said:

"We advocate a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards, and an international monetary conference called on the invitation of our government to consider the rehabilitation of silver and related questions."

Two of the principal Democratic speeches of the 1932 campaign were delivered in defense of the gold standard by the Vice-Presidential candidate, John N. Garner, and Sen. Carter Glass of Virginia. These two speeches, a pledge of the Democratic party to sound money, had much to do with Mr. Roosevelt's election.

F. D.'s GOLD STAND

In discussing the Democratic platform in a speech on June 30, 1932, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Sound money is an international necessity; not a domestic consideration for one nation alone."

In a subsequent address at Butte, Mont., the Democratic candidate said:

"Sound money must be maintained at all regards."

He reaffirmed his pledge to the sound money plank of the platform in his Seattle address.

Mr. Roosevelt was committed to sound money by every pledge and promise a man could make when he took the United States off the gold standard, a thing both Garner and Glass had pledged themselves against.

Charge Against Labor Board Employe Aired

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (AP)—Testimony that a labor board employe was pro-CIO became the subject of a month's voluminous correspondence between officials in Washington and a trial examiner in St. Louis before it finally was admitted in a Ford Motor Co. case there, the House committee investigating the board had developed today.

The testimony in question was that Grant Cannon, field investigator for the board in St. Louis, had told Ford employes who called at his office for advice, that the CIO was "God's greatest gift to the working man," and that they should join its United Automobile Workers Union instead of an independent.

The Ford attorney offered to produce Ford employes who would give this testimony. He said he would show that Cannon had been acting as a recruiting officer for the CIO" and that the board "should take down off the door the initials of the NLRB and put up the initials of the CIO."

The extensive correspondence that resulted was between Tilford E. Dudley, the trial examiner, who favored excluding the testimony as irrelevant, and Washington officials who thought it should be admitted as a matter of policy. Some of the letters ran to four typewritten pages.

Dudley wrote George O. Pratt, chief trial examiner, on March 14, 1938, that Gerhard Van Arkel, board attorney in the case, "this morning suggested that they might ask Cannon his views on the CIO, on Communism, on Russia, etc., and that it would be difficult to exclude such testimonials."

By JACK CONWAY

THE DECISION OF Weston Adams and Art Ross to permit Eddie Shore to play all home games with the Springfield club was a good one. Eddie readily agreed not to play road games with Springfield, while he consented to do some pinch hitting for the Bruins in the event the local club should meet with injuries.

Shore goes to Springfield under a "loan" arrangement. This means Eddie remains the property of the Bruins and may be used by Ross in the Stanley Cup series.

The Shore case has been a bombshell, and everybody who knows Eddie and likes hockey is glad that it was settled without an explosion.

Shore felt at the close of the 1939 season that he should be given an opportunity to invest part of his hockey earnings in the Springfield club. He did so, and at the time he was of the opinion he would be able to get his release from the Bruins.

Despite his years of service, Shore is still a great and colorful hockey player and the Bruins felt they were entitled to his services. Eddie, on the other hand, was anxious to play with Springfield so as to safeguard his investment.

When Jack Crawford was out of the Bruins lineup with injuries, Shore did a fine pinch hit act. Eddie then was anxious to return to Springfield.

Under the new arrangement, Shore will play his first game for Springfield on Saturday night when he will be in the lineup against the Providence Reds at Springfield. It will be the first time Shore has ever played for other than the Bruins.

Shore and Howie Morenz were always my idea of hockey's most colorful players. In the boom days of sports, Shore and Morenz each received close to $15,000 in salaries. Everybody who has seen Shore and Morenz in action will agree that each of them earned every dime they received.

Weston Adams and Art Ross recognized what Shore has done for hockey, but at the same time they could not very well disregard the property right the Bruins had in the veteran. The present arrangement has eliminated all friction, and should work out to the best interests of all parties concerned.

Judge Landis Still the Top Showman

JUDGE KENESAW Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball and whatnot, once more proved he is the game's greatest showman as well as the possessor of an astute legal mind when he released $500,000 worth of ball players held by the extensive farm system of the Detroit Tigers. The Tigers didn't have any legal claim to these rookies, and the Judge called it as he saw it.

This writer recently told in this column how the Tigers signed high school players, often paying their tuition through college and on other occasions refurnishing the homes of their parents. The Tigers invested thousands of dollars signing up youngsters to contracts that were not worth the paper they were written on.

Judge Landis realizes that all of these contracts with minors could be broken in a court of law, and he is anxious to prevent such a happening. The Judge believes that baseball should wash its own dirty linen. The Judge has done his part to help bring about this result.

In the race for young ball players some clubs have been pretty ruthless. Their scouts have painted word pictures for youngsters which would look good in an edition of fairy tales.

It is time that something was done to stop these raids on high and prep schools and the other incubators of baseball.

Hockey Player System Is Very Unsound

THE FARM SYSTEM built up by National Hockey League clubs is even worse than those that exist in baseball. In hockey all a club has to do is to write a letter to a player to place him on the negotiation list. This automatically bars another club from trying to do business with the partieular player to whom the letter has been written.

The club writing a letter to a player is supposed to place a copy of the letter in the office of President Frank Calder. These letters are not open to inspection by minor league clubs which may be later barred from trying to sign a young player on the ground he is on the negotiation list of one of the major league teams.

Hockey clubs should not be allowed to tie up the future of a young player unless they intend to give him a job at once.

National Hockey League clubs have disrupted minor leagues by recalling at many as three or five players over night. You can imagine how the fans of a minor league city feel when they awaken in the morning to find that one of the major league teams has stepped in and taken a group of their better players. This naturally caused hockey interest to fall off in minor league cities suffering from such injustices.

It is futile for hockey and baseball to eliminate these injustices before new leagues are organized and the matters at dispute end up in the courts. The easiest way to give fuel to promoters planning to organize new leagues is to be unfair to the competing athletes.

10,000 HAIL ICE FOLLIES; COMEDIANS 'STEAL' SHOW

By DAVE GLUECK

The late Florenz Ziegfeld must have smiled benignly in his grave last night as the Ice Follies of 1940, a precise kaleidoscope of color and beauty on steel, opened before more than 10,000 enthusiastic fans at the Boston Garden.

SANTA'S NIECE. Vivacious Lorraine Hopkins, Toronto, as she appears in Igloo number, one of features of "Ice Follies of 1940," now showing at Boston Garden. Lorraine is one of the myriad cuties in the ice extravaganza.

In the best Ziegfeld tradition, rim skips to precision pairs, this most brilliant spectacle of its kind ever moved with the speed of a locomotive and added three comedy acts that drew more enthusiasm than most theater farces.

The show opened with an Arctic address as well take Dear Gordon McKelvie, ace producer of Dopey, Grumpy and the rest from Snow White and Seven Dwarfs. Next each spot was illuminated in turn as Belle Hornung and Ben Stapstad exhibited their feet as ballroom dancers on ice. The speed of their medium plus expert pace and control made the investment of the ice and the teacher husband to execute waltz steps, tandem jumps, prone clutch a fair financial return.

Mr. Osborne Capes, senior figure skating champion of Canada, followed with a drum major solo. Then came the McKelvie brothers, who last the spectators gasping with a head to head stand, their feet on ice skates.

USED RACING BLADES

Hector Lee, only fancy skater to use racing blades, jumped over hurdles and finished with a leap through three burning loops. Lee must practice long and hard to perfect this trick with the same speed that marks his skating, but the added leverage helps him to attain the speed necessary for his spectacular leaps.

Evelyn Chandler, acrobatic artist paired Bruce Mapes for a Cuban mood, which featured an arctic rhumba. The ice was the only cool thing about their turn.

Last number before the intermission was a variation of the swing waltz long time favorite with follies fans. The Ice Follies corps of eleven ladies swung out in pairs under rainbow lighting, dipping and gliding in perfect unison and rhythm. They repeated three times to persistent applause.

Beautiful Bess Ehrhardt assisted by 24 ladies of the ice descended from her step throne to solo brilliantly in melody in motion.

COMEDIANS BRING DOWN HO

His honor, Horace Brock a forlorn figure of that species of ice, fondly brought down the Garden and rated three encores with his slapstick clowning. Lacks is reminiscent of Cesar Chapman's pantomined pathos and the fans seemed to appreciate him almost as much as the master of comedy.

Edwin Shipstad and Oscar Johnson who first conceived and produced the Follies, triumphed with another team of collegiate capers.

Last before the grand finale were Frick and Frack the riotous Swiss hill billies. Double jointing themselves into ridiculous positions, the Alpine comics, gave a packed house its sore long laugh of the evening.

Cuccinello in Florida; Lauds His Rookie Rival

BRADENTON, Fla., Jan. 16 (AP)—Tony Cuccinello, veteran infielder of the Bees, may be replaced at second base by Sebastian Sisti, a kid he tutored, but if he is, it'll be okay with Tony.

"Sisti is a great prospect," grinned the little Italian as he arrived here for a few weeks vacation prior to the opening of the National Leaguers' spring training camp.

"He's shown a lot of ability," continued Cuccinello, "and should develop into a great player. He's a great kid."

And if Manager Casey Stengel should shift Tony to third to make way for the kid, then Tony won't mind.

"It's okay with me," he grinned again, "just so long as I have a job and can play baseball."

Tony, a "team player," spent many hours with Sisti here last spring, showing the youngster the fine points of the game he had picked up in his years of play. Sisti came south with the Bees just for the experience, but his knowing won him a trial with President Bob Quinn's club.

Sisti played second base for Boston in 34 games, accepted 175 chances with only one error for a fielding average of .994.

He also performed at shortstop and third base. Appearing at bat 215 times in 63 games, he got 49 hits for an average of .226 but his supporters believe that will be improved.

Cuccinello said a leg injury suffered early last season in a collision with Dick Bartell had healed and he felt he would have a good year. Strenous handball and basketball play in the north during the winter showed the leg as strong as ever, Tony said.

Kearns Out to Break Jacobs' Monopoly

By the Associated Press

It doesn't add up, but the word is going around that Pop Warner will be back at Stanford in an advisory capacity.

The Doc Kearns-Jimmy Johnston-Jack Dempsey combination (which will stage Pastor vs. Bud man) is out to break Mike Jacobs' fistic monopoly, and don't let anybody kid you about that.

More than one manager was baiting his hook for Pitcher Paul Trout when the word came he was not to be liberated.

For the past year two former assistants of Doc Sutherland have been quietly installing his system at Florida U., if that means anything.

Two more proclamations like that one Sunday, and Judge Landis will better the record hung up by Abraham Lincoln, Jan. 1, 1863.

The Hogue twins of San Diego, two of the likeliest ring prospects on the coast, are looking for a manager . . . Frank Thomas, Alabama coach, who went deer hunting in Texas, brought back a linebucker instead of a buck.

Lynn C. Doyle, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin: "Connie Mack has been re-elected president of the A's for the fourth time . . . and there you have the perfect third term precedent."

• • •

Comedian Bert Wheeler has bought a half interest in Steve Souris, the welterweight . . . Lefty O'Doul is giving Babe Dahlgren secret batting lessons on the Coast.

When Taisto Maki, the great Finn runner, comes over to steam up intereatin the Finnish relief drive, his interpreter will be Paavo Nurmi, who knows exactly four and a half words of English . . . Needless to say, one of 'em is dollar.

• • •

Hey, wait a minit, judge . . . it was the Yankees, not the Tigers, they wanted broken up!

Lynn Club Stages Diamond Belt Trials

The Pioneer A. A. will stage the first of its annual diamond belt boxing series eliminations Friday night at the Lynn Arena, with all eight classes in competition.

Bill Downing intends to match the eight final winners with the same number of New York boys late in March.

Some of the boys already entered are Frankie Pecoraro, Weymouth; Charlie Pierce, Brockton; Al Dutra, Cambridge (New England champion); Tony Patrone, Brockton; Frankie Norman, Lawrence; Charlie Sergei, Boston; Jack Borasky, Chelsea; Bill Weinberg, Chelsea, and Stanley Koslnicki, Lowell. Entries should be sent to William Downing at 128 Walnut st., Lynn.

Suffolk Sets Mass. Handicap For July 17

New England's greatest racing classic, the sixth running of the Massachusetts Handicap for $50,000 added, has been set for July 17, and once again will be run on a mid-week afternoon, with no change in the distance of a mile and a furlong, or in its conditions.

The date of the Massachusetts was set by Pres. Charles F. Adams of Eastern Racing Association, and Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan at a conference in Florida, at which it was agreed to continue all 14 of Suffolk Downs' traditional stake events and these will have a total value in 1940 of $132,500 added.

1939 CHAMPIONS MEET

The total amount of purses distributed at the 1940 meeting, which will run May 20 through July 27, will be in excess of 1939, when $669 680 was distributed, the third highest total in the country, and may reach $700,000.

The Massachusetts this year will have special significance for the turf world because it will mark the first big stake race in which Challedon, the 1939 champion, and Bimelech, the 1939 two year champion, could meet in the east.

Challedon of course, has his choice of winter racing in the Widener or the Santa Anita Handicap, according to owner William L. Brann's wishes, while Bimelech will be fitted during the winter for the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness. The big handicap race of the eastern summer season is the Massachusetts, but it of course is too early to discuss other than the probabilities of the two great champions meeting then.

MADE DEBUT AT SUFFOLK

Challedon is one of the most popular horses to ever run in New England and certainly will be nominated again for another crack at that rich Massachusetts Handicap purse which last year meant $49,250 to William Woodward.

Colonel E. R. Bradley and Trainer Bill Hurley picked Suffolk Downs last summer as the track where Bimelech, destined to be an unbeaten two year old, was to make his first start and New Englanders saw the now famous colt win a five furlong race for $1000 at Suffolk Downs on June 28. When Bimelech

Suffolk Downs Stake Events:

CUNNINGHAM WARNS SKATERS BE ALERT

Lost to Gene Venzke By Napping in Race

By OLYMPIAN

"Don't let 'em catch you sleeping," grinned Glenn Cunningham, world's greatest miler and one of the greatest athletes in the annals of sport.

It was in the dressing room at the Boston Garden, last Saturday night, after the human Man O' War had just failed to catch Gene Venzke in the last desperate dash for the worsted in the Dream Mile that featured the games of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

We had asked Glenn for a conditioning tip for the hundreds of men, women and children, "from Six to Sixty" in training for the great Silver Skates Derby, which will be staged under the combined auspices of the Boston American-Record-Advertiser in the Boston Garden on February 4th.

"No, never let 'em catch you napping, as Gene Venzke caught me, tonight," repeated Cunningham. "That goes for skaters and every other athlete. Never underestimate any competitor. I fell asleep watching Chuck Fenske, Rideout and San Romani and let Gene open up too big a gap on me. I would have caught him in another stride. But it was my own fault. I fell asleep."

RACING TIPS LATER

We told the greatest athlete in the last quarter of a century that his tip rather was a racing tip instead of a training tip. We informed him we were saving racing tips for later on and that it was advice on conditioning the contestants looked for now.

Glenn erased his grin and his face took on a serious expression. He pondered a minute and then said:

"The most valuable conditioning asset is a foundation of stamina and endurance. Athletes will get nowhere without a well rounded physique and splendid all around physical condition. A runner or a skater mustn't think its his legs only that win. In a close race one draws reserve and energy from his entire body. A chain is only as strong as its weakest link.

"The first thing a skater must do to get into condition for a big race like the Silver Skates Derby is to build himself up all around, clean out his pipes and breathing apparatus and get a foundation of stamina and endurance. He later can sharpen up his speed.

TRAIN IN OPEN

"I am a bug on open air training whenever possible," concluded the greatest miler of all time. "Keep away from stuffy gymnasiums and smoke clogged rinks. Get out in the open all you can. You can't do too much open air walking preparing for any competition."

Prospective contestants in the Silver Skates Derby are notified that entries will close on Friday, Jan. 26, not on Jan. 30, as originally announced. No entries will be received after Friday, Feb. 26. Here are the first twenty entries received for the Men's Senior Silver Skates Derby:

Adrien Roy, Nashua, N. H.; Francis H. Scallin, Pawtucket, R. I.; Philip F. Cyr, Caribou, Me.; Francis Silk, Lonsdale, R. I.; Paul Hanchett, Newport, N. H.; Ervin Chicoine, Burlington, Vt.; Edward MacDowall, Worcester; Armind Degrandpere, East Jeffray, N. H.; Leonard E. Gorman, Wellesley; Joseph Thorton, Walter Dyer and Walter Novak of South Boston; Herbert A. Managoff Meets Texas Badman

Two distinct opposites in wrestling will take over the battle pit in the main bout of Promoter Paul Bowser's all-star show tomorrow night at the Arena when Bobby Managoff, sensational Armenian youngster, clashes with Ernest Franz Hefner, the muscular Texan.

Managoff, who wrestles cleanly, is the fastest and most clever man in the ring today, while Hefner, who combines all the better features of the mat's famous villains, has scarcely been known to go through a bout without breaking rules by the dozens.

Hefner can deal out a great amount of punishment when he once has his foe on the run, as witness his modified murder of Bull Martin and other victims in Boston rings. But he has never met a man like Managoff. His former foes have been bulky and hardly able to evade his deadly, if not legal attacks. But he might be a greatly surprised man when he swings at Managoff.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

In the long run, the Bruins will cash in on the decision which was rendered whereby Eddie Shore is allowed to play at home with his Springfield Indians . . . Once that he had received permission from the N. H. L. to negotiate for the purchase of the Springfield Indians, Eddie Shore had a half-nelson on the Bruins.

True, the Bruin-Shore agreement read that "Mr. Hockey" could be recalled after Dec. 15 if, in the opinion of Pres. Weston Adams and Manager Art Ross, his services were needed . . . But, in the event that "Mr. Hockey" refused to comply with that agreement there was nothing that the Bruins nor the N. H. L. could do about it . . . Of course, the Bruin management could demand that "Mr. Hockey" be suspended . . . But, in view of the fact that he wasn't playing for Springfield, a suspension wouldn't have carried the lick of a gnat . . .

Eddie Shore

FANS WANT SHORE

Thousands of Bruin fans have been yelling their heads off because Eddie Shore isn't with the Boston club . . . Although he is well over the peak, Eddie Shore is still the fair haired boy with the followers of the Bruins . . . Shore is a rare combination . . . He's a great hockey player and a remarkable showman . . . He has the color which causes traffic jams at the box office . . . Whether he's a better player than a showman, we wouldn't know . . . But, there's no question but that the fans want him in the Bruins' lineup.

According to the viewpoint of the fans, Eddie Shore is the player who has given them a run for their money . . . His spectacular rushes paid dividends . . . His mistakes were overlooked . . . For a king can do no wrong . . .

PLAYED ON THE LEVEL

Eddie Shore had, and still has ambitions . . . His primary objective was to coach the Bruins . . . He might have been appointed coach after the 1935-36 play-offs . . . But, when he refused to cross up Frank Patrick he lost his opportunity . . .

During the 12 years that he played for the Bruins Eddie Shore paid his own freight . . . At various times, he was persona non grata with the less rabid fans, due to some of his escapades . . . And, occassionally, he was in wrong with his teammates . . . But, a majority of the fans pushed their hard earned money through the box office wicket to see "Mr. Hockey" strutt his stuff.

In all probability, many of Eddie Shore's boosters haven't been regular attendants at Bruins games since "Mr. Hockey" decided to devote his time to his Springfield Indians . . . But, the absence of Eddie Shore from the Bruin lineup is not wholly responsible for the drastic falling off in attendance . . . Lack of competition must take the rap for that condition . . . The fans realize that there are only three major league clubs in the N. H. L. . . . They tax the capacity of the Boston Garden when the Bruins are playing Rangers and the Maple Leafs . . . But only the "d e a d heads" and the dyed-in-the-wool fans turn out in tilts with the Blackhawks, Canadiens, Detroit and Americans . . . And there'd still be plenty of vacant seats if Eddie Shore was with the Bruins . . . Eddie is a great favorite but he hasn't the box office appeal to pack 'em in without a worthwhile attraction as an extra inducement.

Westy Adams

Instead of boycotting the Bruins for allowing Eddie Shore to play with the Springfield Indians, the fans should get behind Pres Weston Adams and Manager Art Ross for their courageous decision . . . Appreciating what Eddie has done for the Bruins, Pres. Adams and Manager Ross felt that it was their duty to "loan" Shore to Springfield . . . Naturally, they couldn't agree to allow Eddie to play in other than home games but they certainly made a real concession when they gave him permission to play in the International-American League.

Eddie Shore has $26,000 invested in the Springfield Indians . . . In the event that Canada votes for conscription this spring, Eddie Shore will blow his 26 G's . . . He'll still have the franchise . . . But, his players will be in the army . . .

Madigan Loses Six Grid Players

MORAGA, Cal., Jan. 16 (AP) — Fifteen St. Mary's College athletes, including six members of the 1939 varsity football squad, were dismissed because of deficiencies in scholastic requirements.

They failed to maintain a "C" average. Edward P. "Slip" Madigan is head coach at St. Mary's.

Grimes' Dad Denies Death

OWEN, Wis., Jan. 16 (AP)—"I'm the liveliest corpse you ever saw," Burleigh Grimes' father said today, refuting a report from Hundred, W. Va., that the former major league baseball pitcher's father had died there.

Nick Grimes, who will be 66 in September, added:

"You've got to be lively in 26 below weather. I never heard of Carlton Oliver Grimes (who was reported to have died at Hundred) in my life."

Nick said that the West Virginian who died at 55 was a bit young to be the father of Burleigh, who will be 47 next August.

The only reason Nick Grimes wasn't at work today was because 26 is too many degrees below zero to cut ice.

RACE CHIEF DIES

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 16 (AP)—Thomas J. Clare, 63, superintendent of the Saratoga, N. Y., Racing Ass'n, died of a heart attack last night soon after arriving here for a winter vacation.

CALLAHAN PREDICTS KAYO WIN OVER BYRON

Handy Andy Callahan sees a kayo victory over Young Byron when they mix in one of the 10-round main bouts of Eddie Mack's Argonne A. A. boxing show Thursday night at Mechanics Building, with Salvatore Bartolo battling Bob "Poison" Ivy in the twin-feature of the most alluring thump festival the Top Sergeant has bobbed up with.

ANDY CALLAHAN

Handy Andy, the Lawrence lefty, who missed winning a world's championship by a whisker and is one of the greatest fighters ever developed in this section, is in top condition, full of fight and doesn't figure Young Byron, Roxbury comer, will be around in the same ring with him more than five rounds.

"I want to make a buck and get back in the sport I've always loved," says Callahan and a gent wishful of making a buck is always dangerous when he's fighting for it."

Bartolo, N. E. feather king, and Ivy are expected to furnish more fireworks, as brilliant as those exploded last week when Ivy, the Hartford hurricane, and George Salamone roared to a boisterous draw.

Other bouts will be Johnny Sorenson vs. Leo Dulmaine, six; Tony Gouveia vs. Jack Caparelli, six; and Freddie Discoll vs. Eddie Holmes, four-round curtain-raiser.

Cronins Prepare to Move Into New Home in Newton

(Boston Evening American Photos)

Mrs. Joe Cronin and son Tommy seem highly pleased at prospect of coming to Boston to live permanently. "There'll be a Cronin playing shortstop for Newton High in 1953," says infant Tom,

The Cronins' new Colonial home at Lake and Laurel sts., Newton Center. Home will be ready when Sox open here in April, architects say. Joe has signed a new five-year contract with the Hose, and has made several visits to Newton since last fall to see how construction has been progressing.

All set to go. Manager Joe packs grip preparatory to making flying trip to Boston and Newton to see new home.

EAGLE SEXTET MEETS TERRIERS AT ARENA

There'll be a load of New England Intercollegiate Hockey League action on display tonight at the Arena. Boston College and Boston University are paired in the feature game and Northeastern and M. I. T. will do battle in the other half of the college doubleheader.

To the winner of the B. C.-B. U. clash might go undisputed possession of first place in the league standing. Colby, which plays Bowdoin at Brunswick tonight, is at present leading the league.

TEST OF GOALIES

In the Boston College-Boston University clash the customers will be given the opportunity to view some of the finest college hockey talent in the land.

Henry Sullivan, the slight sophomore who'll stand guard at the Terrier net is recognized as one of the most colorful and capable netkeepers in collegiate ranks. Thus far this semester "Sully"—with the exception of the Harvard game—has been sensational.

Tonight though, Boston University's Mr. Sullivan will be on the spo'—as will young Hughie Sharkey, also a sophomore who'll be playing his first starting role of the current season in the Eagle cage. The power of the opposing first lines will definitely keep the goalers working overtime.

Though, like the entire starting sextet, two-thirds of the Eagle first line is sophomore, the talent is there in abundance. Sophomores Ray Chaisson and Al "Fishy" Dumond, both of Cambridge, the former from Cambridge Latin, the latter from Rindge Tech and Johnny Pryor of Framingham give Coach John "Snooks" Kelley a power ridden first "wave" and though the Terrier's regular "front liners" may have the edge in experience Boston College considers the advantage a midget one.

FOLEY MEETS GREB

Pat Foley, Worcester, and Joey Greb, Herkimer, N. Y., promise to provide one of the greatest slugfests ever witnessed hereabouts when they collide in the ten round main event at Mechanics Hall, Friday night.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 16—Joe Cronin's happy—happy at his new five-year contract with the Red Sox, happy at the thought of becoming a permanent resident of Boston (Newton to be exact) and happy at the prospects of the Red Sox in the 1940 pennant race.

Since the dismantlement of the Detroit Tigers farm system by Judge Landis, Joe sees prospect of re-opening negotiations with the Tigers for Catcher Birdie Tebbetts.

The Tigers turned thumbs down on the Sox when they offered Doc Cramer and Joe Vosmik for Tebbetts last fall, and completed a deal with Connie Mack whereby they obtained Outfielder Wally Moses for Second Baseman Benny McCoy.

But McCoy has been declared a free agent by Judge Landis, and Moses goes back to the A's, so the Tigers still are without the hitting outfielder they need so badly.

Now, perhaps, they will listen to the Sox proposition for Tebbetts.

Cronin has made two flying trips to the Hub since the season closed, and both times he has spent more time in Newton than in Boston. He is delighted at the progress they are making on his new Colonial home in Newton Center and plans to move in when the Sox open their season here in April.

TAXES are promoting militarism.

LANDIS THREATENS FURTHER PENALTIES

CHICAGO, Jan. 16 (AP)—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, in a new ruling today warned that in every instance of secret player transfer each club concerned would be fined $500 and each club official or employe participating would be placed on the ineligible list.

Landis also ruled that players must not be signed to blank contracts in the future and that a true copy of the contract must be given the players. Also, that players cannot be signed for other clubs, directly or indirectly, whether owned, affiliated or independent.

The commissioner declared that "working agreements" must be executed by the club actually making them and cannot be executed in the names of affiliated or subsidiary clubs.

"In every case of certificate of club relationships, affiliations and connections hereafter filed," Commissioner Landis further ruled, "which is found to misrepresent or untruthfully report any material fact, the club will be fined $1000 and the official executing such certificate will be placed on the ineligible list."

Americans May Be Shifted To Mid-West

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (INS)—As a way out of the difficulties which have beset the New York Americans for a dozen years, the club's National Hockey League franchise may be transferred to Buffalo or St. Louis at the end of the current season, it was learned today from an authoritative source.

Though refusing to confirm the probability, Red Dutton, the American's manager-coach, admitted today it presented inescapable advantages which are being considered.

The club's chronic financial plight traces to the heavy rental at Madison Square Garden, coupled with the fact that it has been the sufferer in sharing territorial popularity with the Rangers.

The chief attraction of Buffalo and St. Louis is that both cities offer arena rentals many percentage points lower than that paid to the Garden corporation.

Pettinger Joins Bears This Week

HERSHEY, Pa., Jan. 16 (AP)—Coach Herb Mitchell announced today that Gordon Pettinger, left-winger of the Boston Bruins, is joining the Hershey Bears of the International-American League this week.

TAXES are projecting America into foreign wars.

Sox 'Feelers' for M'Coy

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 16 (AP)—Benny McCoy, Detroit Tiger infielder who was declared a free agent by Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, said today, "I'm not in any hurry to sign with any club.

He has already received "feelers" from six big league clubs, McCoy said, leading him to install a telephone in his home. The Landis decision upset a deal that would have sent McCoy to the Philadelphia Athletics.

Of prospects for selling his contract, McCoy said:

"I understand I can't do anything for 15 days, and I haven't had any official word from the commissioner yet.

"I haven't set any price yet, and I don't intend to set any until I find out what sort of offers they're going to make."

The Tiger had valued McCoy's contract at $40,000.
